Women In Sports

By JOAN E. PIOLLET

Played annually for years before present WRA's organization, the Army-Navy all-star hockey game dates back to when Army team played in ROTC uniforms and the Navy team appeared wearing Blue Band outfits.

Freshmen were required to attend years ago, and it seems to us that present frosh should be interested in the games' outcome for this year's Army team includes almost the entire frosh team.

Navy team has a slight edge in games, boasting a string of 5 consecutive victories until Army's win last year. With Army composed of champions, it should be quite a battle. Best players for each position are selected from class hockey teams, and placed on Army or Navy list in an attempt to balance the sides.

Army-Navy captains will be elected on the field prior to the first game. With Miss Mildred A. Lucey, instructor in physical education, as referee, the two teams will play for two out of three games.

WRA is presenting its first Fall All-College Co-Rec event from 8 to 11 o'clock tonight. Similar Co-Rec Nights were sponsored during Summer semester, and proved very successful. Planned for students' entertainment, roller skating in the Coliseum is scheduled for interested persons tonight.

We, The Women The Job Is Done— It's Time To Go

By LOUISE M. FUOSS WOMEN'S EDITOR

Every preceding women's editor has sent a special ghost to tell us that we must write a final column. For the first time in three and one-half years of Collegian, we are deliberately evading an assignment.

Traditionally, we would talk about printer's ink, linotypes, and the joy of knowing the reasons behind next week's news. We could apologize to people whom our convictions have offended and thank our friends. We might even tell you what Collegian has done for us, what we've tried to do for it, and how much we have enjoyed being women's editor.

Somehow, we don't like to look back. Just as the presses stop rolling after the last paper has been printed, so we want to leave Collegian now that our job is finished.

The presses never retract what they have printed, never explain, never predict. They do their job and stop, quickly and without ceremony. We have written only what we believed and have done what we thought was right. Our work is done.

Monday, a new women's editor will take over. We know that she will do a good job. It's time for us to go now.

Six Coeds Practice For Milking Contest

Great, great grandma will feel right at home on at least one part of the Penn State campus this afternoon.

At that time six of her offspring, returning to the tasks of the pioneering days, will again milk cows.

The occasion will be the annual Coed Milking Contest, a humorous feature included in the Dairy Show which will be held in the Stock Judging Pavilion.

Already practicing for the right to be "Penn State's Champion Dairymaid," are Verna Rothermel, Margaret Bugainch, Hilka Heydt, Rebecca Way, Joan Somers, and Molly Pickering.

GE To Interview Coeds For Technical Positions; Require Basic Courses

To interview coeds for personnel positions in the General Electric Company, a representative will meet students Thursday and Friday, it was announced last night.

Similar interviews were conducted last week by a representative of the Armstrong Cork Company. Of the 19 students contacted, nine were offered positions with the concern.

Miss Julia G. Brill, assistant professor of English composition, reminded coeds that any senior women interested in applying for positions at the Frankford Arsenal in Philadelphia should see her as soon as possible. Any basic engineering training is the only requirement for such applicants.
