Queen Discarded From Prom Plans

Reversing plans made early this week, the committee for the combined Senior Ball and Junior Prom last night decided against having a Senior Queen to be crowned at the dance next Friday.

The decision was made because of a conflict in ideas of the two classes represented by the committee and the fact that the simplicity of the dance with its military decorative scheme would not warrant having a queen.

Seniors, basing arguments on their not having a May Queen this year, asked for the Queen at the dance to take her place. A conflict arose because both classes should be represented in any such move, resulting in decision to have none at all.

Booth reservations for the dance may be made at Student Union beginning today with a deadline set for Tuesday, Harry C. Coleman '44, in charge of publicity, announced last night.

William C. Mazzocco '43, in charge of corsages and defense stamps, stated that ribbons—the color scheme for which has not been determined yet—will be used in place of corsages. The ribbons will be given to purchasers of one dollar's worth of defense stamps at Student Union.

A part of the program will be set aside for defense stamps purchased with them.

Plans for decorations with military theme were not yet completed when the committee meeting was held last night.

Cloetingh Directed Her First; Now He'll Oversee Her Last

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of feature articles on members of the Penn State Players' next production "Ghosts."

In her first play on the Penn State campus, she was directed by Arthur C. Cloetingh, head of the department of dramatics. In her last play, "Ghosts," she will again be directed by Professor Cloetingh who has not directed a play since then. Her name is Joanne Palmer—and she is president of Players.

Miss Palmer has been cast in eight Players' shows including "Ghosts," and in "Ephrata," a one-act play written by Kathryn M. Popp '43 and Frank S. Neusbaum, professor of dramatics. Her parts have ranged from an ingenue, to a sophisticate, from an intellectual, to a social climber; from a domineering wife, to a sister in a religious order.

In her second play, "Family Portrait," she portrayed an oldish, unmarried woman. Miss Palmer recalls the part laughingly, for she was very heavily padded to represent the robust character she enacted. She was assistant director in "The Taming of the Shrew."

A member of Theta Alpha Phi, dramatics honorary, Miss Palmer has, in addition to acting ability, an All-College average of 2.78.

She considers her characterization of Mrs. Alving in "Ghosts" her most difficult role to date. According to Miss Palmer, each part becomes harder because of the actor's increasing desire to live his part. But on the other hand, she added, more ease on the stage is acquired with each performance.

Post Office, Other Firms Offer Jobs During Christmas

Students interested in seasonal employment over the Christmas holidays should consult the Student Union bulletin board at their earliest convenience.

Various organizations all over the state have declared their desire to employ numerous college students during the Christmas rush. Several letters have been received to date from various Postal centers and other firms, Dean Warnock said, and many more would probably arrive in the near future.

In conjunction with these requests the Dean also stated that students could not be dismissed before the completion of the examination period. Students desirous of employment may obtain detailed information at the Student Union desk or may consult the Student Union bulletin board.

Graf, Metzger, Bjalme, Price Form New Slate

A fourth party crashed into the political limelight last night, when Walter C. Price proclaimed to the assembled members of Campus '45 that he was resigning as clique chairman to run for junior class treasurer as a candidate of the Campus-Mixed Party.

To the startled sophomore Campus clique members, who a few minutes before had heard their campaign chairman report that the only activity necessary would be support of the All-College slate, Price announced that the new party's candidates would include John C. Graf, president; Kathryn K. Metzger, vice-president; Gunnel O. Bjalme, secretary; and Price, treasurer.

Chairman and organizer of the new clique, according to the former head of the powerful Campus '45 machine, is William E. Reimer. Purpose of the new clique, Price stated at the Campus '45 meeting, is to insure representation of the independents as well as the fraternity man in sophomore class offices.

The decision to form the new party, Reimer announced later, came after John C. Graf, the only independent preliminary nominee of the Campus '45, was defeated for the party's vice-presidential nomination.

Since Independents '45 have not presented a slate of candidates, the Campus clique nominees would have been without opposition, had not the new group come to the front.

The meeting which was to produce the political bombshell was the regularly scheduled gathering (Continued on page four)

Thespians Base New Show On Cabinet and Curfew

Thespians will return All-College Cabinet a "favor" for applying an 8:30 curfew on rehearsals for their annual presentation, by basing their show around Cabinet and the curfew. The name of the student production is "Kurfew Kapeys!" or "For Whom the Bell Tolls!"

Filled with spicy gags, new songs, crazy skits, and performed by a bevy of beauties, the production will be presented November 20 and 21 in conjunction with Junior-Senior Ball and Pitt weekend.

The prologue is a parody on Cabinet, and according to one of the Thespians, will take Davis and his brain-trusters for a ride.

Another feature of the show is a strip polka number. It is not yet known who will strip or how much, but one Thespian said to remember there are priorities on materials now.

A new song, "Going to Boalsburg for Beer," will also be introduced by the three stooges, Bud Mellot, Ted Clauss, and Jack Hunter.

Several novel dance numbers for the production, directed by Mellot, are now being rehearsed by the choruses. Included in the dances are a tango, a jitterbug number, and a military tap.

Mim Rhein, Jane Abramson, and Bill Christopher will sing the lyrics to the new songs written by the students.
