Almost Anything Goes

At first glance at the record it would seem that Penn State students don't care too much about what they're seeing so long as it's a movie.

The quality of a picture has nothing to do with its success in State College, according to Carl Beckdel, manager of the Cathaum Theatre. The house may be quite empty one night, and the next evening the same picture will provoke a line of anxious movie-goers halfway down the block.

It's all a matter of chance if you're catering to Penn Staters, and such things as the weather, dances, and sports events are more likely to keep them away from a picture than unfavorable reviews in city papers.

But don't make the mistake of thinking that unsuspecting college students can be led to see any old picture like lambs to slaughter. An institute of higher learning does set certain cinema standards and when these are affronted, the stu-

Marine Reserve Corps To Examine on Monday

Pre-screening interviews will be held by Lieut. Curtis, of the Naval Air Corps examining board, in 305 Old Main, beginning at 8:30 this morning for all men interested in the Navy's V-5 program, the office of the Faculty Advisor on War Service announced last night.

No physical exams are to be given but Lieut. Curtis will test the eyesight of all applicants and interview candidates.

Freshman and sophomore students in the Enlisted Reserve Corps who are "earmarked" for the Navy must not withdraw from school on their own initiative, FAWS Galbraith said.

In the advent that a student in the E. R. C. leaves school he will immediately be drafted into the Army, although he was scheduled to transfer to the Naval Reserve at the end of his sophomore year.

Marine Reserve Corps candidates will be interviewed and examined in 305 Old Main, beginning at 9 a. m. Monday morning, December 7.

Students intending to apply must have several papers in order. Among them is their birth certificate.

Deans Ask Students to Restrict Use of Cars

With the application of gasoline rationing to the entire state and country, Charlotte E. Ray, dean of women, and Arthur R. Warnock, dean of men, have issued the following joint statement for the benefit of Penn State students—not a few of whom have been driving indiscriminately on unrationed supplies.

Now that gasoline rationing has become statewide and nationwide, operators of student cars will be expected to restrict the use of their cars to necessities. For reasons of patriotism and the national welfare they should understand that they are bound by obligations that affect all other citizens. The rather general use of cars by some students while supplies of unrationed gasoline were available has brought criticism on them and on the College.

Student car owners who prove themselves to be indifferent to the national needs will suffer the revocation of their student car permits.

Ibsen's Mystery Drama, 'Ghosts,' Opens in Auditorium Tonight

Cloetingh Directs Cast of Five

Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts" will be presented by the Penn State Players in Schwab Auditorium at 8:30 p. m. today and tomorrow.

Under the guiding hand of Arthur C. Cloetingh, professor of dramatics and authority on Ibsen, the cast of five will present probably one of the most moving plays produced on this campus since the last Players' drama, "The Little Foxes," Cloetingh said.

The title of the play is somewhat misleading. Eerie noises and shrieks are not a part of "Ghosts"; rather the only "ghosts" in the play are the spectres looming out of the dark past, haunting the lives and overshadowing the happiness of all five members of the cast.

Joanne M. Palmer '43, president of Players, in the leading role of Mrs. Alving, has an opportunity to depict one of the most difficult parts ever offered her.

Robert H. Herrman '44, as Oswald Alving, her son, is an example of the smoothness and ease on stage that 12 Players' shows can produce.

William F. Emmons '44, as Pastor Manders, is the typical self-righteous clergyman of the middle nineteenth century.

Two newcomers to the Players' troupe are Dorothy T. Koush '44 and Robert R. Leibacher '45.

Tickets are now on sale at Student Union. Price of admission is 55 cents for both evenings.
