

BETWEEN THE LIONS

By BEN BAILEY
Sports Editor

More than a thousand students found their way to Rec Hall the other evening to watch the Intra-mural face-lifters slug it out for individual titles in the independent and fraternity ring contests.

And almost a thousand students again voiced their disapproval of several of the decisions handed down by the judges, who again were borrowed from the ROTC department.

One bout which drew rather loud protest from the spectators was that in which Fred Krug was handed a decision over Len Catanoso in the 145-pound class. Although his footwork did resemble that of a pensioned kangaroo, Catanoso appeared to have shaken enough dandruff loose from his opponent to claim what would have been a clean-cut decision in any other ring—and yet Krug wandered out of the ring the winner.

Another doubtful one was the altercation between Cook and Brooks. Although he stopped a crippling hit in the engine-room early in the opening round, Cook swung enough leather to easily take the next two rounds and even stop the bout by ripping Brook's one eye open in the third—yet Brooks was awarded the decision.

This same situation was encountered during the past several seasons when the ROTC officers came out with several controversial decisions.

Perhaps the IM promoters would do well to heed the suggestion of the vociferous one in the peanut gallery the other night, who advised the addition of a sailor or two in the lineup of judges to add a little balance to the "military" point of view.

One of the best bouts of the evening had little Joe Cutrone matched against Norm Gordon, captain of the cross-country team, in the 121-pound division.

After a fairly even start, Cutrone began to throw everything but his wardrobe at his bigger opponent to dispel any doubt in the minds of those present as to who deserved the independent crown for that weight.

Lack of proper conditioning made itself felt in several of the bouts when wheezing fighters strove valiantly in some instances to bolster watery knees that displayed tendencies to buckle.

Nothing reflects the sadly neglected physical condition of Penn State students in general more poignantly than a few rounds of boxing with heavy gloves.

Those of us who will be

Each year the Associated Press Bureau of Pennsylvania selects an All-State football team and usually has it spread out over most of the schools in Pennsylvania. Very seldom do more than one or two men from one squad get honored, but this year four of Penn State's squad were honored by the sports writers and coaches of the State who pick the team. The whole left side of the famous Lion line was chosen, namely, Bob Davis, Ken Schoonover, and John Jaffurs. The other choice was Aldo Cenci, 230-pound blocking back of the Blue and White. Schoonover received a majority of votes in the poll. Above, they are Cenci, Jaffurs, Schoonover, and Davis.

Druids, Soph Honorary Elects Becker Prexy

Leo Nobile, football star, was named vice-president of the hat society, and Horace Smith was re-elected secretary-treasurer for the second semester.

Becker replaces Johnny Graf, sophomore 135-pound boxer.

leaving here in the near future for the armed forces are going to have our hands full beating the Jap who has been training for generations on American scrap and rice leftovers.

Winners in the independent class will meet those in the fraternity section for All-College crowns Tuesday night, December 15.

A boxing exhibition by some of the ensigns stationed at the College has also been booked for the same evening, and promises to be an attraction well worth seeing, judging from the hard workouts the sailors are holding in Rec Hall.

Davis, Jaffurs, Schoonover, Cenci Chosen for All-Pennsylvania Team

Associated Press Has Annual Poll

Penn State, with four selections, dominates the 1942 Associated Press All-Pennsylvania College football team announced today.

The entire left side of a strong line that led the Nittany Lions to six victories against one defeat and a tie, along with Aldo Cenci, Penn State's Great Blocking Back, was placed on the All-Star eleven by a vote of coaches and sportswriters. The other seven places went to Pennsylvania, Pitt, Lafayette, Duquesne, Villanova, Lehigh and St. Vincent.

This is how the team lines up: Bob Davis, Penn State, and John Svenson, Lafayette, at the ends; Ken Schoonover, Penn State, and Joe Cibus, Duquesne, at the tackles; John Jaffurs, Penn State, and Mort Shiekman, Pennsylvania, at the guards; Baptiste Manzini, St. Vincent, at center; and Bill Dutton, Pitt; Al Postus, Villanova; Stan Szymakowski, Lehigh, in the backfield with Cenci.

For replacements the coaches and scribes picked a second team composed of Bernie Kuczynski, Bert Stiff and John Donaldson, of Pennsylvania; Charley Nagle and Ramsey Maddock, of Lafayette; Walt Sot, of Bucknell; Fred Dittman, of Dickinson; Joe Jordan, of Haverford; Hal Shoener, of Lehigh; Pete Gorgone, of Muhlenberg; and Max Kielbasa, of Duquesne.

An additional 83 players from the state's 43 collegiate elevens, including Dickinson's great forward passer, Doug Rehor; Moravian's Dave Griffith; and Franklin and Marshall's George Monro, were given honorable mention.

Many outstanding freshmen, such as Temple's Joe Nejman, Bucknell's Johnny Paar and Felix Siezege, Penn State's Larry Joe and Joe Colone, and Penn's LeRoy Pletz, are on the honorable mention list.

Dutton, termed a back capable enough of making one of Pitt's old time powerhouses, and Schoonover, called "amazingly fast, alert and rugged," received the most votes. Jaffurs, Cenci and Szymakowski were close behind.

Other members of the state's outstanding team, Penn State, were given honorable mention in the AP selections. Leo Nobile and Steve Suhey, the sophomore guard duo; Captain Lou Palazzi, the center; Will Van Lenten, senior end; and Sparky Brown and Jack Banbury, both backs, were the ones so honored.

Coach Meyers To Pick Varsity Fencers

Penn State's fencing team, after holding practice sessions for the past four weeks, will unofficially start its season in Rec Hall tomorrow afternoon at 2 p. m. when members of the squad meet each other in Intra-Team competition to determine varsity members for the 1943 season's team.

Fencers who will compete against each other in tomorrow's competition are:

Foil—Wally Riley, Bernie Hankian, Bob Swope, Tim Reede, Tom Davenport, Welling Graul, Larry Tessier, Dave Ozarow, Al Spitzer, and Jim Framo.

Epee—Riley, Hankian, Swope, Davenport, and Tessier.

Saber—Hankian, Davenport, Weiss, Bill Burleigh, and Jim Montgomery.

The foilwielders have not been able to get their orders filled for equipment, especially those for blades because of the need for metal for the war.
