

Cadet Courses Are Praised by WAACS

Officer Calls Courses Valuable for Future

Julia G. Brill, vocational counselor for women in defense, has received a letter from the WAACS commending the College on the establishment of Cadet training courses.

"The program you have set up seems to be a worthwhile one in preparing your students for further training in the Women's Auxiliary Corps. Codets 3 and 8 would be most valuable to future WAAC members as would the other seven courses outlined," wrote Second Officer Helen E. Tait, acting chief of the Individual Training Branch.

Codets 3 and 8, mentioned above, will be offered in the summer semester, the former being a course designed for airplane spotting, map reading, and stereoscopic vision. Codet 8 has been planned essentially for Home Economics women who desire special training in mess administration, Miss Brill explained.

Cadet courses offered this semester for credit are: Preparation for Emergency (1), Conduct of Callistics (2), Company Administration (4), Operation and Maintenance of Motor Vehicles (5), Mess Food Control and Record Keeping (3), and Advanced Baking and Cooking (7).

We, The Women The Boys in Blue Are Human, Too

What do the men around here have against uniforms—that is, the ensigns who are stationed on campus? The newcomers may have priorities on a few coeds, but they are much like Penn State alumni now stationed at other universities.

This existing condition of animosity between students and ensigns was unrealized by us, until a conversation with an ensign revealed that they feel unwanted on campus. They are at some disadvantage, with no fraternity houses to hang out in, and little in the way of social life except big dances and movies.

Sororities, often scoffed at for apparently trying to "make out" with the ensigns, have had coffee hours and informal gatherings for the visitors to make them feel more at home. No such friendly relations have been fostered by men's fraternities.

Put yourselves, you men, in the position of those here for a few months. It may not be long before you will be facing an identical situation. You will have long hours of classes, live in a group, and be practically unable to make contacts with students either in or out of classes.

Freshman Honorary Taps 13 Women

Alpha Lambda Delta, national women's freshman honorary, held its first meeting of the semester yesterday at the apartment of Miss Nina Bentley, assistant to the dean of women.

Invitations to pledges were sent to Helen H. Barr, Carolyn G. Blass, Irene E. Fedan, Deborah Ishlon, Ester B. Leffler, Helen J. Martin, B. Ruth Pilemeyer, Lucille Rosenblum, Althea J. Schaeffer, Martha M. Turner, Patricia Diener, Marjorie A. Renner, and Ruth Clyde.

Pledging ceremony will be held in Atherton Hall from 6:45 to 7:30 p.m., February 10.

Miss Edith J. Melville, assistant to the dean of women in charge of freshman coeds, replaced Miss Ruth H. Zang as adviser to the honorary.

Kling Discusses Skiing

Donald King, instructor in English composition and physical education, will discuss skiing at an open meeting of the WRA outing club in Room 3 White Hall at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening.

antisocial? Invite some of the boys in blue around for dinner, a party, or a smoker. Remember, you may be fighting with them soon. So, why be in opposition now?
