We, The Women Make Your Bed... Then Lie In It

There's a time and place for everything. Sure, it's a very old saying, but it's one of those things that's been trite and true.

Today it applies to sleep that stuff that everyone wants but what nobody tries to get.

According to all decent clocks, there are 24 hours, and that's all, in each day. Under the plan of the gods, we work by day and sleep by night. Is it our idea, then, to defy them?

Coeds seem to feel that sleep should be done only when there is nothing unimportant to do. A game of bridge, a bull session, any dull movie, all have wondrous powers to interrupt or just dismiss any ideas of sleeping; but dreams take precedent in any class or during the time that a class is scheduled.

All of this is private business and is something that should be left entirely to the individual... when it effects only the individual. But as the nights in a coed's life get shorter, WSGA agrees that women set the "time to retire" ahead a little.

Differing from other student government requests which have been made in the past, this one is for the good of just "you."

Sure, being told to get sleep is a big joke... it always will be, but how about making your beds (by noon) and then lying in them at the appointed time... not the next morning when hygienists say you don't get the best quality of sleep anyway.

Joan E. Piollet '45, president of Alpha Lambda Delta, is in charge of the plan for tutoring.
