We, The Women Men Want To Know Coed Regulations

"How late can coeds stay at fraternity houses?"

Unaccustomed as we are to questions of this type, we intend to answer this inquiry of a "must-be-new" pledge who was wondering about the rules.

For once, WSGA is not the one laying down the law for the women. It merely complies with regulations made by the Inter-Fraternity Council and its oft-repeated dating code.

According to the latest edition of the rules and regulations, women are to leave Greek palaces by 8 p. m. during the week regardless of the fact that dormitory doors are locked at 10 and 11 p. m.

Weekend rules include open house for ye women until 1 o'clock and 11 p. m. on Sundays, IFC has decided. Special programs and "big weekends" mean that fraternities are open to coed guests until their own campus permissions run out.

Realizing that the men of the College drew up this code and fixed these rules, women might show that they understand what they are.

Before curfews have to be started for the men's domiciles, coeds will see benefit in starting for the dorm according to the dating code regulations.

A chance never given to anyone but students is now open for acceptance to Curtiss-Wright Cadettes.

WRA's facility-full White Hall will be offered to the campus newcomers on the same basis and just as often as it is to the regular College enrollee.

Even though campus-ites have failed to realize in full the values of the building, we're looking forward to some strong Cadette action.

Navy Reserves--

(Continued from Page One) program. He warned that in doing this, the reservist subjects himself to court martial for double-enlistment, and should remain in the group he is now in until further notified to avoid trouble. Air Corps Reserves who leave College after March 20 will receive full credit for the semester, upon the recommendation of their dean, said Harry P. Hammond, dean of the School of Engineering last night. He added that the only change to this rule in his school will be in several major subjects such as thermo-dynamics, where the student must have this course to continue into more specialized subjects.

Scriptwriters Have Troubles Galore

Several weeks ago, three people were perfectly contented—enjoying College student life to a degree of utmost happiness. There was little they could ask from the gods: they had enough to eat and a comfortable place to sleep.

Then something happened. The phone rang! Three hundred people rushed to meet each other outside Schwab Auditorium. After going into a huddle, they clamored down the creaking stairs to the auditorium basement.

Filing quietly into the Thespian room, they locked the door behind them. What was their objective? Was there a plot being formed? Yes, that's it.

Two hours later, the three figures emerged, tired but enthused, from the "corner room" of Schwab. Upon reaching their respective rooms, the three dashed frantically for a black box in the closet. Several minutes later, the keys of three typewriters were busily "banging out" the script for Thespian's 46th annual production. Several days ago, the phone rang again! Three dreadfully weary script writers, realizing that the show must go on, are now doing a wonderful job of final script revising for the next Thespian production to be presented Senior Ball weekend.

So they go on, asking no thanks for their faithful service, the folks behind the scenes, three Thespian script writers, Larry Chervenak, Jane Abramson, and George Graham.

Germans are now conceding their inferiority on the Russian front, which sounds like an admission that maybe they're only half a master race now.
