

Women Compete in Intercollegiate Telegraphic Swimming Meet Today

As the men face the intercollegiate swimming meets at Rutgers this afternoon, coeds will be swimming against unseen opponents in a final effort to grasp honors in the women's intercollegiate telegraphic meet in White Hall pool at 2:30 p.m.

Last year the Penn State mermaids ranked third among the major Eastern colleges. Hopes are high for bigger national honors this year as freshman Marilyn Globisch, already national woman's breast stroke champion, is within six-tenths of a second of the 100-yard national time. This is the first time that a national champion has represented the College in the meets. Marilyn swims the butterfly breast stroke.

Martha Goztonyi is another outstanding breast stroker who swims the European style. "Gussie" is a native of Budapest, Hungary. The team is pinning hopes on Gloria Woodward, 40-yard free styler, and Joan Miller, 75-yard individual medley contestant. Marilyn will also swim in this event with Joan, who learned her almost perfect technique while she lived in Hawaii.

Free stylers Joan Clark, Gloria Whyel, Peggy Quick, Estelle Brown, and "Tip" Geyer are showing marked improvement, according to Phyllis Watkins, manager of the team and president of the swimming club.

"This is the best swimming team in three years, boasting such swimmers as Gloria Woodward and Marilyn Globisch," said Miss H. Jean Swenson, swimming instructor and team coach.

"Telegraphic meets are unusually difficult because of almost 'blind swimming.' The inability to see one's opponent puts that last swimming spurt at the finish entirely upon the effort of the individual swimmer. She has no way of knowing if her competitor, swimming at another college, is close to her or not," the coach added.

"Babs" Clark, all-college champ for three consecutive years, was the mainstay of the team three years ago. This year's team, however, shows all signs, if ability and effort are any criteria, of breaking college and intercollegiate records as well in women's swimming.

Members Hold Vic Dance

Social Committee of the Russian Club invites all members to attend an informal vic dance to be held at the Sigma Phi Sigma house, Locust Lane and Prospect avenue, from 9 o'clock until midnight tonight. Refreshments will be served.

Dancing Classes Continue in Armory

All-College dancing classes sponsored by the Penn State Club were resumed last night, according to Ray A. Zaroda, Independent Men's Association president.

Students may attend classes in the Armory every Friday from 7 to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 3 to 4 p.m. until April 10.

Harry C. Bland, committee chairman, promises instruction in fox trot, shag, rhumba, waltz, and conga steps. Latest recordings will be played over the public address system.

Other committee members include John Yahars, in charge of arrangements; William E. Evans, tickets; James A. Casey, instructions; and Edmund R. Koval, publicity.

Group instructor is Joseph Ferro, who has acted in this capacity for the club for eight consecutive semesters.

All coeds are urged to attend the meetings since many social functions have been eliminated from the calendar due to war curtailment, Edmund Koval, publicity head, stated.

Season tickets may be obtained at Student Union for a fee of $2.50.

Campus Patrol announces that all students should take their coats to classes instead of leaving them in halls, as a great many have been stolen.

We, The Women Footstepless Grass . . . The Season's Best

Gardeners have said it with signs every Spring for centuries.

And coeds have paid attention to them about as accurately as a draft-dodger trying to convince the recruiting officer that he has 200-20 eyesight.

Spring is in the air but not on the lawns. "Footsteps in the Dark" haven't given it a chance.

Despite grounds and buildings ordinances, editors' editorials, presidents' pleadings, and just plain ordinary signs, the walking public insists on strolling cross-country.

This Spring, what with all the colorful uniforms and outfits of the service men and women stationed here, we're plugging (not even subtly) for a 'keep-off-the-grass' conscious College enrollment.

Last night as this paper went to press and as the Spinsters were skipping, the first day of a College-wide Red Cross Drive ended.

Despite the fact that a large number of fraternities have just received notice to move, it is reported that several of the Greek mansions have donated 100 per cent.

Despite the fact, also, that women are taking over campus activities in many cases, it's the men who have made the initial contributions.

Not one of Penn State's approximate 1,900 women have given to the All-College effort for the relief of America's fighting forces at home and abroad.

That's great, coeds!

Faloon Wins Title, Crowned King At Spinster Skip

Rube Faloon, senior class president, added to his laurels when he was crowned, with a saucepan, as King Dogpatch, Catch of the Campus, at the Cwens-Mortar Board Spinster Skip in White Hall last night.

Runners-up for the title of most eligible bachelor on campus were Cliff "Hairless Poe" St. Clair, who was awarded a bottle of hair-tonic, and Hank "Goose-grease" Keller, the proud winner of a shaving mug and shaving soap. Prizes were conferred on the three lucky men by Margaret K. Ramaley, chairman of the dance.

Drummond Speaks

Dr. Laura W. Drummond, director and professor of Home Economics, will continue her talks to senior women on her book, "Youth and Instruction in Marriage and Family Living," in Women's Building, 4 p.m. Tuesday, it was announced yesterday. Women whose last names begin with H-M

Pigtails were sported by many of the coeds who followed Sadie Hawkins' advice and caught their men for the Skip. Plaid shirts of the loudest varieties were much in evidence as the 326 couples who attended the dance cavorted to the music of George Washko's Campus Owls.

Sketches of original Dogpatch characters decorated the walls of the gym, serving as inspiration to the one-night Nittany Valley hillbillies. In addition to these cartoons of Daisy Mae, L'I Abner, and Mammy and Pappy Yokum, there was a mural, in true Sadie Hawkins Day style, of the race in which the gals had to engage in order to catch their men.

Woman Feature Editor Speaks Here Tomorrow

Mrs. Barbara B. Murdoch, feature editor of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, will speak at a tea for women journalism majors given by Theta Sigma Phi, national women's journalism honorary, in northeast lounge Atherton Hall from 3 to 5 o'clock tomorrow.

Mrs. Murdoch has held varied positions during her career, including a year of radio work, supervising of the women's division of a government agency, and buying for a large department store in Philadelphia.

Three years ago she came to the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and has been working there since then under the name of Barbara Barnes.

will be guests. Coeds who are not able to attend at their scheduled time may visit any of the meetings held in the future.
