

83 Million Quota Set by Red Cross For Dressings

Coeds Urged to Repeat Last Week's Increase

A new national goal for surgical dressings in March has been set by the Red Cross. The Armed Forces are in desperate need of 183,000,000 dressings, which is far above the quota set in February. Both quality and quantity are necessary if the goal is to be met.

State College centers, by remaining open the entire day, are attempting to raise the number of dressings made last month from 20,000 to 31,000 for March—a 50 per cent increase.

Coeds rolled 775 dressings during last week's class in 110 Home Economics, which was an increase of 108 over the previous week. Attendance last week, although showing a marked improvement, did not increase the number of bandages rolled in proportion because of the number of coeds who attended for the first time and received instruction during the two and a half hours period.

Attendance increase last week, according to Mrs. Henry S. Brunner, chairman, was encouraging to the instructors, but in order to show any real results it is necessary that those same coeds return this week. Two weeks ago 77 coeds wrapped 775 dressings, while the previous week 36 more experienced coeds turned out 567 dressings.

The average attendance during January and February for sororities and Philotes, independent women's organization, has been:

Kappa Delta	10
Delta Gamma	8
Chi Omega	6
Kappa Alpha Theta	3
Alpha Chi Omega	3
Kappa Kappa Gamma	3
Phi Mu	3
Zeta Tau Alpha	2
Theta Phi Alpha	2
Philotes	2
Coed enrollment	1800

"It is necessary to develop skill in rolling surgical dressings and this cannot be done if coeds come only one Thursday night. Attendance should be continuous," Mrs. Brunner commented in urging those who helped increase the attendance last week from 36 to 77 to return again tonight.

Career Women Take War Training Courses

Pennsylvania women from a wide range of occupations are now engaged in preparing themselves, through training and study, for work in war industries.

This was revealed after a survey made by the College Extension Service. Of the great number of women now enrolled in the College's war training program, the great majority are stenographers, typists, and secretaries.

School teachers, it was found, represent the second largest group. In the current program the number of teachers is practically double those in earlier programs.

Housemaids, sculptors, artists, laundry workers, machine shop employes, social workers, and trained nurses are also represented among the current group.

In the past, women enrollees in the war training courses have come from such varied occupations as farming, engraving, tobacco processing, paint and varnish factory hands, watchmaking, welding, electricians, house painting, meat cutting, and printing.

Scholarship Awards

Virginia Krousse has received the Philadelphia Penn State Alumnae Club's yearly scholarship award. These scholarships usually amount to $50, and the Lancaster Alumnae awarded one to Martha J. Haverstick early in the semester.

Dick McNaull, also of the senior Collegian staff, will probably take his leave when the advanced ROTC boys are ordered to active duty. In the meantime, he is being married to Polly Keller this Saturday. . . . and incidentally, take a look at the mastheads of the two publications and compare them when the new and rejuvenated Froth hits the streets today.

Miss Ina Padgett, associate professor of home economics, will leave this morning to attend a Nutrition Symposium at Richmond, Virginia, to be held today through Sunday.
