

Clothes Conservation Week Begins With Lecture By Home Ec Specialist

Tailoring Hints Will Be Given

Next week has been designated as Clothing Conservation week by the State College committee on clothing conservation, according to Miss Marion L. Carr, assistant professor of home economics.

Miss Mabel Berseth, clothing specialist in home economics extension will speak on "Clothing In Wartime" in 110 Home Economics Tuesday evening. Miss Berseth will talk about current clothing trends including advice about mending clothing due to the present scarcity of tailors.

State College Home Maker's Club, Home Economics department and State College high school have united their efforts in co-operating to bring this matter to public attention.

An exhibit from the British War Relief Salvage Society of Philadelphia, will be shown in the Athletic Store featuring clothing made from renovated garments similar to those now being worn in England.

Posters carrying out the Conservation theme will be placed in numerous downtown store windows. There will be a prize offered by the Home Makers Club for the best poster. State College high school art classes will make posters which will be judged by members of Miss Sibil Emerson's Art class in home economics. College art classes will also supply stores with posters.

Students and townspeople are urged to attend the lecture which will be supplemented by an exhibit entitled "Men's Mends," and a movie.

66 Doubleheaders

The National League baseball schedule, released today, shows that 96 doubleheaders are scheduled for the coming season, opening April 21, with the St. Louis Cardinals booking 16 of them. Instead of the usual four circuit trips, each team in the league will be held to three for the coming season because of wartime restrictions.

Junior Service Board Plans Transfer Dinners

At a meeting of WSGA Junior Service Board, junior women's activities honorary, on Thursday, a plan was suggested whereby transfer dinners would be held between Curtiss-Wright Cadettes and coeds from Atherton and MacAllister Halls.

"We feel that both coeds and Cadettes would like to get to know each other better," Carol Kane, president of the organization explained, "so we're going to ask two coeds from each table in the dorm dining rooms to exchange places with two Cadettes for a meal."

If the plan proves workable, it will be continued by Junior Service Board as a regular feature.

At the same meeting, members decided to begin work on a project to make scrap books for convalescent soldiers. The books will be distributed through the Red Cross.

Mortar Board Tops Previous Sales Receipts

Twenty-two dollars and ninety cents worth of war stamps, an increase of $2.50 over last week's receipts, was sold by Mortar Board members at women's dining commons Thursday night, Grace Jones, president, announced.

Sales at Ath West, where Dorothy Brunner and Florence Jaffe were stationed, came to $4.20; Lucille Weinstein and Adele Levin sold $4.50 worth of stamps at Ath east; Mac Hall diners bought $11.75 worth from Dorothy Jones and Frances Angle; and the total at the Sandwich Shop, where Doris Stevenson sold, to $5.25.

Roethke Presents

Just before leaving State College on a year's leave of absence, Prof. Theodore Roethke presented to the College Library the manuscript and galley proof of his outstanding first volume of poems, "Open House." The Library will treasure this as one of the many important contributions which Professor Roethke made to its collections. His advice was invaluable in selection of poetry. The manuscript and galley proof will be placed on exhibition.

Women In Sports

Alpha Epsilon Phi A team nosed out Jordan Hall A team to win the WRA intramural table tennis tournament. Edythe Greenburg, playing for AEPPhi, lost her set to Jordan Hall's Ann Cohen, 21-19, 21-17. Joan Runkle, AEPPhi, won out over Becky Walker, Jordan Hall, in the second match, 21-12, 21-14. The AEPPhi's won the doubles, 23-21, 21-11.

Intramural volleyball final match between Ath East and West will be played off Monday or Tuesday. The time will be decided at the WRA Intramural Board meeting which will be held at 11 o'clock this morning. The winner of this game will cop the WRA Intramural cup which has been in the possession of the Thetas for the past year.

Wheel of Fortune Night

Teams of four or six coeds and individual coeds may still sign up to participate in the aquacade for the "Wheel of Fortune" which will be held at the White Hall pool from 7 until 8:15 p. m. Wednesday, according to F. Doris Stevenson, WRA Publicity chairman.

The WRA Intramural cup and individual awards will be presented at this time, Miss Stevenson said.

Date Change

The co-rec bike hike, originally scheduled for April 17, has been postponed and will be held May 1. This change is due to the coffee hours sororities and dormitory units are having for Air Corps Cadets.

This co-rec weekend will also feature soft ball, volley ball, and a bridge tournament. Equipment from White Hall will be used, and all games and contests will be held outdoors.

Playnight

Florence Rothman, WRA Archery Club president, and Elizabeth McKinley, WRA Executive Board representative, will act as hostesses at White Hall Playnight which will be held from 7 until 10 o'clock tonight. At this time, all White Hall facilities, including bowling alleys, rifle range, table tennis equipment, and the swimming pool will be at the disposal of coeds who attend.

We, The Women

Barracks Are For The Men; Women Must Read The Rules

"Ya gotta show an official Army pass to get in to see an Air Corps man," so until officials start handing them out (and they seldom do) we, the women can merely extend invitations to the visitors and moderately show the Penn State spirit.

We mean that it's all well and good for coeds to make these trainees at home. That's expected and desired. But we mean too, that there are some rules and regulations that the Army has put down from which coeds are not to be exempt.

Superior officers have to object (and they already have) when College women make the barracks their second home. Seems like a few overly-patriotic gals took some reading material out to the lads and stayed for a friendly chat.

But the Army says there's a time and place for that and neither coincide with the period of the coeds' visit.

Officials say that pre-fighters may not date during the week . . . they may only talk with coeds for short times between classes or as they meet them in town and on campus. More freedom is felt while the boys are at "open post" or downtown alone. When they have a "release from quarters," they are in town set for a shopping or errand tour and will march in details.

The usual weekend for the average trainee will be his own after an inspection tour Saturday afternoon and will continue until early Sunday evening. They will be granted special permissions, though, for unusual programs, as they were last night.

Therefore the cadets may be entertained in dorms and sorority houses in those free times. They may recall old acquaintances and create new ones in free time on campus.

But the once-frequented fraternity houses are now "for men only" and coeds will just have to write that down in their little books and get used to it. The men, no doubt, want you to visit and will probably hesitate to send you away, but remember that their superior officers are people who see all and forget little, so give them a chance.

You can walk 150 miles with them, it says here in small print, if they're on "open post," but a visit made at the wrong time might cure you of taking chances.

Thespian Show Packs Auditorium

the final scene when the Stooges were caught in the WAACS tent on a pledge errand and suffered the consequences. The WAAC sergeant wanted to know why in the blank they hadn't called her quietly, and see if perhaps they couldn't find a friend for her. Adele Yablon did well as the WAAC leader.

Bud Mellott and Mim Zartman make a swell dance team, and should be given a chance to really do their stuff. Bill Cissel designed the settings and costumes. Mellott did good work with the chorus, one of the best performances seen in a show here for a long time.

In spite of the lags, the show is worth seeing for its original material, new and good music, and fair enough acting when the players really get under way.

Tau Phi Sigma Elects

Tau Phi Sigma, women's shorthand and typing honorary, elected officers Wednesday night. Those elected are: Suzanne M. Clouser, president; Louise W. Henry, vice-president; and Harriet L. Miller, secretary-treasurer. They will hold a formal dinner in April.
