

Editor Of Economics Addresses Chapel On Democracy, Religion

Mr. Ordway Tead, LL.D., L.H.D., editor of economic books for Harper & Brothers, will be the chapel speaker this Sunday. For his topic he has chosen "The New Relation of Democracy to Religion."

After Mr. Tead's graduation from Amherst College, he lived three years in the South End (settlement) House in Boston. During the first World War he worked for the United States government in the field of labor relations. Ever since conducting war emergency courses at Columbia University in 1917-18, Tead has retained his connection there as lecturer in personnel administration. After five years as editor for the McGraw-Hill Book Company, he became in 1926 editor of economic books for Harper & Brothers. The speaker is past president of the Society for the Advancement of Management; a member of the Economic Association; chairman, committee on publications, National Council, Y. M. C. A. He is chairman of the Board of Higher Education of New York City. In 1939 he received an honorary LL.D. from St. Lawrence University. Tead is the author of numerous books, "New Adventures in Democracy," his latest, being published in 1939.

"Praise" by Alec and Rowley will be sung by the College choir.

Riding Club Plans Business Organization

At a meeting Tuesday evening a committee was selected from the faculty and private owners to operate the Penn State Riding Club from a business standpoint for the coming year.

This committee will be headed by Howard S. Coleman, with the following making up the committee: Prof. W. D. Swope, in charge of operation of stables and grounds; Dr. Henry L. Yeagley, planning of student activities and social events; B. R. Gardner, publicity; and Ray Conger, finances.

There are at the present time forty student members of the club and seven who have private mounts in the club stables. It is planned to contract for a full year's supply of grain and hay in order that the continuation of the club may be assured. A number of social events are being planned and the regular schedule of instruction for beginners will continue under the direction of Mr. Coleman.

CA, Hillel Hold Forum

PSCA and Hillel Foundation will hold the first post-war forum, second floor lounge, Old Main, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The discussion will be led by Dr. J. Paul Selsam, associate professor of European history.

This is the initial meeting of a series to be presented for five weeks, culminating in a symposium.

Freshmen Find Tribunal Strict With Violators

order of Tribunal," are just two of the messages which will be carried over campus by back this next week. All signs will publicize the Penn State Engineer.

Violators at the meeting were Mervin Alpert, Fred Barrauk, Paul Dunlap, Gerson Eisenberg, a second offender, Frank Fair, Robert Geise, Arthur Goldberg, Al Hablesome, Marvin Inselman, Paul Rossman, Howard Lee, Irwin Raffal, Hyman Rosenzweig, Alvin Smith, Walter Schwartz, and David Walters. One freshman, Joseph Biddle, received notice but failed to appear before the board. About three men were excused from penalties.

Ten men will report in front of Old Main every day at 1:15 for a customs inspection, as well as appearing at the main gate at 8:30 Sunday morning to clean up the campus.

All freshmen who attend the dance tomorrow night need not wear their customs, Kessler stated. This includes violators who are authorized to wear signs during the week.

Tribunal also suggests that second semester freshmen do not haze first semester freshmen or otherwise exercise upperclass privileges over them.

'50 Books Of The Year' On Display At Library

The twenty-first annual exhibit of "Fifty Books of the Year," organized by the American Institute of Graphic Arts, will be on display at the College Library during the month of August. The purpose of the exhibition is to show fifty current examples of superior bookmaking. These examples have been selected for physical attractiveness, durability, and to demonstrate resourcefulness in dealing with problems specific to the contents.

The "fifty books," selected from 571 volumes entered by 122 publishers, were chosen by a jury made up of Elmer Adler, research associate in graphic arts at Princeton and consultant of the Princeton University Press; George Macy, director of the Limited Editions Club; and Ray Nash, associate professor of art and printing at Dartmouth.

Air Corps Shipments Boost Bellefonte Line

A recent shipment of Army Air Corps men to the College once again brought the Bellefonte Central Railroad passenger service into the limelight after 25 years of service.

The railroad didn't carry passengers on any large scale since 1918 when the service was discontinued because of bus and automobile competition.

Approximately 500 Army Air Corps men were the passengers as they arrived from all over the United States to receive special instruction at the College.

The Bellefonte Central served as a passenger carrier between Bellefonte and State College from 1890 to 1918. Practically all the students came to the College by this method. Now the railroad is used chiefly to deliver freight to the College.

The railroad winds its way through the mountains from Bellefonte to State College, taking 20 miles to cover the airline distance of only nine miles. It is one of the heaviest and best built short line railroads in the country.

Engineer Deadline Set For Contest Entries

All contest entries for the September issue of the Penn State Engineer must be turned in before August 15, Charles R. Ammerman, editor, announced today.

The articles may be written by a basis of interest and writing ability. Although a semi-technical subject is preferred, the student may write on any subject he chooses. The first prize is $10 and the second $5.

The articles may be written by any college student, service, or special student. Entries may be delivered or mailed to the Penn State Engineer, Room 1, Armory, or to Student Union, plainly marked with name, address, and college status.

The July issue of the magazine with its new colored cover was placed on sale this morning.

Collegians on sale at Graham's News Stand are for sale to townspeople only, Phillip P. Mitchell, Collegian business manager, has announced. Students may pick up their copies at Student Union, and because of the paper shortage, are requested to take only one copy.
