

Curtiss-Wright, Hamilton Continue Training Program

Curtiss-Wright Corporation and Hamilton Standard Propellers division of United Aircraft Corporation have both indicated their intention of placing additional women at the College for specialized training when the present courses end, Dean Harry P. Hammond of the School of Engineering announced today.

Forty-two Hamilton Standard scholarship winners will complete their six-months course at the College December 4. Others in this program will continue their studies for a second six months. The Curtiss-Wright Cadettes numbering 93 will complete their year-long training December 15.

Curtiss-Wright has set January 10 as the starting date of its new program, but Hamilton Standard hopes to have its new group on the campus by December 10. The combined groups probably will equal the present total of approximately 200 women, Dean Hammond said.

Dean Hammond was high in his praise of the present groups, and expressed confidence that the new groups will be equally able. He said that approximately 35 per cent of the girls in both groups had achieved the dean's list, and were considered excellent students.

Their work is not identical, but both embrace courses in engineering drafting and design. All the girls in the Hamilton Standard program are being trained for jobs in the company's East Hartford, Conn., plant, while the outgoing Curtiss-Wright Cadettes are scheduled to begin work immediately in the engineering design department of the company's Buffalo, N. Y., plant.

For the new programs, both companies already have started to recruit their new students. Those selected for the Curtiss-Wright program will be trained at Penn State, Purdue, Iowa State, Rensselaer Tech, or Minnesota. Coeds on the campus who apply and are (Continued on page eight)

Placement Service

With the accelerated wartime curricula reducing the Christmas vacation considerably, government post offices are faced with a shortage of vacation help. Post offices located in Harrisburg and Philadelphia have sent applications to the College Placement Service which students may fill out in order to secure these temporary positions. These applications should be taken care of as soon as possible.

Representatives from Frankford Arsenal, Navy Yard, Signal Corps, and National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics will be present for interviews to be scheduled through the Placement Service as soon as possible.

In past semesters, the College Placement Service has secured numerous positions for graduates, and company representatives have been very well pleased with the interest of the students. This semester, the seniors have not been turning out for these important in-

Marquardt Announces Sale Of Artists' Course Tickets

"Priority" numbers for the new Artists' Course Series will be distributed to faculty members and townspeople at 4 p. m. Monday, and to students at the same time Tuesday, according to Dr. Carl E. Marquardt, Artists' Course chairman.

Priority-number holders will return to the Athletic Association office to purchase tickets the next day—faculty members and townspeople on Tuesday, and students on Wednesday. Windows will be open from 8 a.m. until noon and from 1:30 until 5 p.m., with tickets selling at $3.75, plus tax, and $2.75, plus tax.

Leading off this year's three-concert series will be the General Platoff Don Cossack Chorus, composed of 27 Russian ex-cavalrymen under the direction of Nicholas Kostrukoff.

Veterans of more than 4,000 recitals on every continent, the Don

Cossacks will add a number of "songs of the new war" to their traditional program of liturgical music, folk songs, and Cossack melodies and dances.

In the spotlight will be such songs as "Beloved City," the farewell of an army pilot as he takes off to battle. "Beloved City" was composed by Bogosovlsky, a young flier who took part in the recent heroic defense of Stalin-grad.

"Song of the United Nations," the musical composition adopted by the Russians as their marching song, will be another highlight of the recital.

Included also will be Lev Knipper's stirring "Song of the Plains," Russian battle song that is already in the United States Army Kit of popular melodies; and "Katusha," a simple song in the traditional folk spirit, telling of the loneliness of a soldier for his loved one.

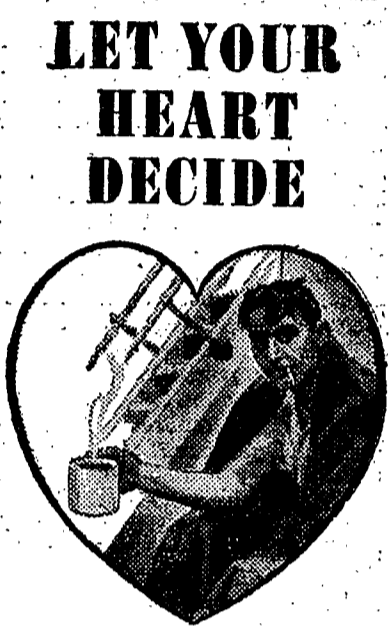

Second concert on this season's "Artists' Course Series will be presented by Alexander Kipnis, baritone, and Martha Lipton, soprano, on January 4. Final recital will be by Joseph Zsigeti, violinist, and Claudio Arrau, pianist, on January 25.

In a few month our new mascot will be back, but then he may be too big for comfort and fondling. Although scores of admirers have trekked up to the Vet Lab and obtained a close-up of the cub, many will have to wait to pay their respects. The lion has lifted school spirit to a high peak, perhaps the highest seen here for a long time.
