

WSGA Inaugurates Annual Christmas Relief Fund Drive

WSGA's annual Christmas Fund Drive will be held this year from December 1 to 10, according to Doris M. Funk, acting vice-president. The money received through this drive goes to the Missiling County Child Aid of Lewistown, the American Women's Hospitals, and Mrs. Hetzel's Emergency Aid for Penn State Girls.

The Emergency Air Fund helps needy women students in securing hospital aid, books, and other necessities. The Missiling County Child Aid provides a real Christmas for children who have been adopted but whose parents cannot provide more than a bare living, and the American Women's Hospitals give relief at Christmas to children in the war-torn countries. The group has already done a great deal of work in England and China.

This fund, which was started in 1939, needs donations more than ever before. Collections will be made in dorms through WSGA House of Representatives.

Refugee Seeks Vengeance For Nazi Persecution

(Continued from page one) er, Auman said, "When Hitler took over in 1933, the people thought he would stay only the regular time of four or five weeks, but he stopped all party systems and subdued the people by fear. One couldn't talk to a friend for fear he was a traitor. Hitler gradually won over the people, and checked any who resisted. The children, who were influenced when still very young, reported traitorous parents to the authorities."

"A page from the book, 'Hitler's Children,' would be an ordinary day in Germany. There is nothing but truth throughout the whole book. The movies one sees today are not propaganda. Such are the actual conditions over there."

Classes were changing and Auman watched the coeds walk through the Sandwich Sop.

"You have very pretty girls here in America," Auman said. "I don't know many of them though. And I can't get used to jitterbugging, but I like the strange rhythm."

Reiner Auman might not know many girls, but then again too many are too distracting. Two freshman coeds approached Reiner with delightful informality. And it might be said here, that the foreign technique has its points.

Frosh Women's Forum Plans Agenda for Month

Meeting plans of the Freshman Women's Forum through the month of December were decided upon at the regular meeting of the organization in 304 Old Main last Tuesday night.

The schedule is as follows: Nov. 30, Sorority vs. Independent discussion; Dec. 7, Boy Meets Girl debate; Dec. 14, technicolor movies and election of officers; and Dec. 21, candlelight ceremony and induction of officers.

Various committee chairmen were also chosen at the meeting. They are Alma Kingsley and Dorothy Colyer, worship; Patricia Enwright and Betty Jane Haines, program; Catherine Garrett and Corrine Berkeoile, social; and Barbara Hampe, publicity.

Prof Heads Convention

When the American Society of Animal Production meets in Chicago November 30 and December 1, Prof. F. L. Bentley, head of the animal husbandry department at the College, will serve as chairman of the program on teaching. Practically the whole program will be devoted to plans for post-war instruction and training.

Cadet Nurse Corps Offers Coeds Top Jobs

One out of every 22 girls now in college is needed by the nursing profession every school year to meet the demand for nurses brought about by the war, according to Miss Eugenie De Armit, who was on campus Monday and Tuesday representing the National Nursing Council for War Service and the United States Cadet Nurse Corps.

Miss De Armit came to State to recruit students for the Cadet Nurse Corps, the U. S. Public Health Service plan which offers a free professional education including free tuition, free maintenance, free uniforms, and a monthly stipend during the entire period of training in an accredited school of nursing to those who qualify.

"Girls haven't realized the wide range of possibilities in the nursing field—nursing education and supervision, industrial nursing, public health nursing, and school nursing from pre-school through colleges—all require the services of trained college women," declared

Miss De Armit. She added that those women who have psychology and education majors and then enter nursing have an especially wide field in the profession. Furthermore, she pointed out, nursing is one profession in which the top jobs will stay with women after the war, and not revert to men.

That nursing is not merely a duration job was especially stressed by Miss De Armit, who told of the wide-scale plans now being made to utilize the nursing services of the United States in post-war reconstruction.

"Even now," she said, "the Harvard Public Health Unit is ready to sail within a few days' notice for Greece, with a full staff of sanitary engineers, public health nurses, nutrition experts, and physicians, to follow our armies of occupation into the country as soon as their offensive starts, to begin at once the rehabilitation of the Greek people, and to organize an organization of Greek personnel to carry on the work when they are able to."

The training college women receive in social sciences and languages, in addition to nurse's training such as that received in the Cadet Nurse Corps, fits them especially well for reconstruction work like that described, Miss De Armit believes.

Additional information about the Cadet Nurse Corps may be obtained from George N. P. Leetch, director of the College Placement Bureau.

College Committee Recognizes Masquerettes

Masquerettes, women's honorary society for coeds who have worked in Theatricals for three shows or the equivalent, has been recognized by the Committee on Student Welfare, according to Marie-Ellen Pennell, vice-president of the organization.

The new society recently initiated the following coeds: Joan Piollet, Genevieve Fluke, Jane Gleichert, Hannah Frankel, Kay Kirk, and Dorothy Morrow.

"At present plans are being made to entertain at the U.S.O. dances, and all members have been offered training as Junior Hostesses," Miss Pennell added.

The officers of the group are the same as last semester: Mim Zartman, president; Marie-Ellen Pennell, vice-president; and Ann Briel, secretary-treasurer.

Studies Tire Problem

R. U. Blasingame, head of the department of agricultural engineering at the College, has been asked to study tire problems on mounted potato sprayers for the Pennsylvania State Rationing Board.

The findings of Professor Blasingame will be correlated with those of Cornell University and the University of Maine, and recommendations will be reported to the board.
