

Dean Ray Issues List Of Requests To Greeks, Rushees Rules Concerning Bids, Acceptances Clarified

Miss Charlotte E. Ray, dean of women, issued a number of requests to sorority presidents and rushees concerning the handling of bids and acceptances. She stressed that the work can be much facilitated if these methods are promptly carried out.

Please bring invitation list to the dean of women's office Saturday evening before 7:30, since there is much clerical work involved.

Please remind women at your parties Saturday that they can help greatly by replying promptly after they receive their bids Sunday morning. This is very important, as chapters cannot receive the list of acceptances until we have had a reply from every coed invited.

If any coed invited to a party on Saturday evening has an emergency call out of town, she should notify this office of her absence in order to avoid delaying the acceptance list.

Any woman returning from home Sunday evening may bring her ballot to the office Monday morning. Before 8 a.m. any ballots may be put under the door.

Bids will be delivered from this office Sunday morning.

In the case of coeds being unable to decide now, a suggestion should be given about the opportunity that comes at the end of the closed period of two weeks.

In case of any mistake or misunderstanding about a list, please call this office at once.

If the request in paragraph 2 is followed, lists may be ready before 7 p.m. Sunday, the time designated for giving the acceptance lists to chapter officers.

Please see that invitation lists are typed.

Now that rushing season is over, we believe that every chapter will urge the work of Surgical Dressings Class.

Dehydrators Built From College-Designed Plans

Small, inexpensive community food dehydrators can be built from non-critical materials using plans now available from the agricultural engineering department of the College.

Such a dehydrator was built and first tested at the College agricultural experiment station and at midsummer was moved to the State College High School home economics room to be used for a community canning kitchen. More than 70 persons made use of the dehydrator, drying about 1500 pounds of fruits and vegetables, largely apples, sweet corn, and snap beans.

The dehydrator is simple to operate, being designed so that a portion of the trays may be heated without circulating hot air through the entire cabinet. Although heat may be supplied in a variety of ways, sources which permit temperature to be regulated are desirable.

Details of the dehydrator are contained in Bulletin 448. Complete directions, together with plans for the gas burner, fans, trays, cabinet, and hood construction, are available.

National War Fund Aids U. S. Captives

Cooperation between the member agencies of the National War Fund is illustrated by a bulletin from Polish War Relief highly commending War Prisoners Aid, recently received by Ralph E. Weeks, state campaign chairman for the Pennsylvania War Fund.

Both the Polish War Relief and the War Prisoners Aid are included in the membership of the National War Fund which is campaigning for a national total of $125,000,000 for the support of the U.S.O. and sixteen other war-related organizations.

The National War Fund is represented in Pennsylvania by the Pennsylvania War Fund, Inc.

The report as received states: "Since the Italian campaign began, the number of Americans who are prisoners of war has, naturally, increased by leaps and bounds. As a result, a great many Americans are hearing directly or indirectly about life in these camps, and from the rather optimistic reports, are coming to think that life in a prison camp is not so bad after all. They are even beginning to ask, 'Why should we give anything for Prisoners Aid?' For this reason it seems appropriate to remind you of certain facts.

"Our American soldier is furnished one food package a week, according to the report, packed and shipped by the American Red Cross, but paid for by the branch of the armed forces to which he belongs. Other less wealthy countries, such as Poland, for instance, cannot spend such amounts of money. The Polish prisoner gets only one package a month.

All first-semester coeds were warned today by Ruth Ernst, Judicial chairman, to continue wearing their name cards. Many frosh have lately been lax in this requirement, and if this condition does not improve, disciplinary measures will be taken.

"American parents of prisoners are sending packages as lavishly as shipping regulations will permit. The Polish prisoner's family is in most cases as desperately in need of food as the prisoner himself and has no money to give the prisoner those things he needs to occupy his mind or his hands.

"Moreover, Poles have been prisoners for four years and because of the long strain they are nearer to the breaking point and need more help.

"We urge you not to lose interest in the work of the War Prisoners Aid."

Campus Trainees Learn To Speak As Well As Fight

Good soldiers should know how to speak as well as how to fight, according to Professor John Henry Frizzell, head of the speech department at the College.

For the first time in the history of the College, Prof. Frizzell and his colleagues are combining a course in oral and written English, at the request of the war department, for A. S. T. P., Air Corps, and Navy V-12 trainees stationed on the campus.

"We are not trying to train after-dinner speakers," stressed the speech professor, "but to give more practical experience. Speech production, projection, and enunciation are important to any soldier."

In addition to eight classes a semester taught exclusively for service men, the speech department has some navy men in its regular classes. The military trainees vary even more than regular students and include both men who have been graduate students at leading universities and those who have had practically no educational background.

Those with specific defects or handicaps, which were not serious enough to keep them out of service but interfere with their speaking, are sent to the College speech clinic or given exercises to work out for themselves. All get plenty of practical experience through such projects as going to the blackboard and explaining some specific subject with diagrams so that the rest of the class can understand it.

The purpose of the course, as outlined by the War Department, is "to teach the student to say and write what he means, concisely and with a purpose, and to read and listen with precise understanding and discrimination."

"A person speaks nine times for every once that he writes," says Professor Frizzell, who is also Chaplain at the College. "You can't learn to speak by thinking about it; speech is an art and you have to work on it."
