

Collegiate Review

"Is an old maid more useful on a farm than a wheelbarrow?" was the subject in a recent debate at the University of Manitoba. The old maids suffered defeat by three votes.

However, the Ag School reports that any three Penn State coeds who feel slighted will be just as useful as any one style of wheelbarrow.

A nickel for your thoughts!

One Spanish professor at the University of Texas pays off for the correct answers to his oral quiz program which he holds in his regular Spanish classes.

Speaking in Spanish, he questioned a freshman: "Have you ever been to Venice?"

"Yes," she answered.

"Were you there in the eighteenth century?"

When the girl answered in the affirmative again, she received a shiny new nickel. Which all goes to prove that the healthy Texas climate really makes for a long life.

It is rumored that our Spanish Department tried this policy but had to discontinue it. They didn't know what to do with their surplus.

The newspaper cartoon boys (and girls) are turning out some fine graphic humor these days. One of the best line cuts of the year was that executed by R. T. Kingman, AS, for the Capaha Arrow, Southeast Missouri State Teachers College. His cartoon pictured a bleary, blue-coated man crawling on a doorstep, the caption: "Refreshed and revitalized after a glorious nine day leave, the V-12 trainee skips back for another semester of hard work—so that someday he can release a WAVE for active duty."

Fort Bragg's Army paper carried an advertisement in which the boys cheered themselves under the rigors of military life. The advertisement tried to publicize the delights of camp life, and read:

"Boys 18 to 38. Attractive lodges each with counselor. Outdoor sleeping facilities available. An experienced staff that will be a friend. Large campus with ample equipment. We offer hiking, calisthenics, formations, and many other healthful outdoor sports. Accent is placed on neatness and discipline. Boys are asked to do little tasks around the camp to prepare them for life. Lessons on self-defense are taught free of charge. We will meet you at the station."

Don't let 'em kid you!

When Pfc. William Prince of the 29th Academic Squadron, Amarillo, Texas, received his dainties back from a town laundry he found that a baby's diaper had been substituted for a face towel.

The following week, Prince sent his linen, didy and all, to the G. I. laundry, and was surprised when he opened his laundry package to find the neatly folded breech-cloth with a note attached by a large safety pin, which read: "We hope you will find this quite comfortable now."

REAL ENOUGH... for Basic Training!

NEW telephone operators generally take basic training at idle switchboard positions. But today's switchboards are crowded with war calls. Meeting the challenge of wartime shortages, full-scale photographs of switchboard panels are helping speed the training of more than 125,000 new operators needed this year in the Bell Telephone System.

Actual cords, keys, dials, and calligraphs for timing calls, give realistic practice, quickly training operators to handle real calls.

Every resource of the Bell System is serving the Nation, maintaining communications now so vital in war—so important in the better days ahead.

War calls keep Long Distance lines busy... That's why your call may be delayed.
