Women in Politics Are Here to Stay

The woman politico is here to stay, in the opinion of Joseph F. O'Brien, professor of public speaking at the College.

Prof. O'Brien, who also is coach of the men's debate team, thinks increased political activity will logically follow women's increased interest in intercollegiate debate.

Advance registrations indicate women will outnumber men for the first time at the Pennsylvania debaters' convention to be held at the College March 24-25. The confab, ninth of its kind, will bring delegations from 18 different State colleges and universities.

Family Breakdown Raises Delinquency

Too many American homes have become boarding houses, in the opinion of Dr. E. B. Van Ormer, associate professor of psychology at the College, who feels that breakdown of family social life is one of the primary causes of juvenile delinquency.

Describing the home as the greatest single factor in delinquency, Dr. Van Ormer said the war has left children without parental companionship and personal guidance, both of which he regards as essential to a sound home life.

He warned, on the other hand, against showering too much affection on one child and neglecting others, pointing out that children frequently place great importance on small differences. Pre-school children, he added, are likely to create a problem only if they have failed to learn the importance of cooperation.

"Many delinquents," he observed, "are children who weren't getting along well in school and misbehaved to receive recognition. It is important," he advised, "that teachers and parents find studies and activities which will permit every child to succeed in some way."

Rather than adopt dictatorial methods in discipline, Dr. Van Ormer declared that the true aim should be to teach children intelligent self-direction within the limits of their abilities. It is also important, he said, that children understand the reasons for rules.

We the Women

Our long-planned system of cafeteria style meals, attempted as an experiment, is now a reality. Coeds tried the plan during final week of last semester, and dormitory officials put it into practice this semester.

But like all similar schemes for feeding a record enrollment of starving women to comply with our schedule of classes, it has its weak points. The main difficulties occur at lunch. Coeds with one o'clocks dash madly to the dining hall at 12:10 if they live in Ath, or run a marathon for Ath if they don't, and then stand in a seemingly never-ending line bitterly "cooling their heels."

These loopholes in the plan could possibly be eliminated if coeds who do not have one o'clocks would eat later. When 12 noon rolls around, hunger prevails and everyone rushes for the line. The system would run much more smoothly if coeds with one o'clocks could eat first, avoid gulping down their food, and maybe even walk to class instead of running.

Anywhere you find the necessity for forming a line, you find the parasites who cleverly break in unobtrusively, bragging about the advantage of having many friends. There are never written rules prohibiting getting in line with friends but it is an infuriating, hopeless feeling to stand in line for half an hour, practically immobile while everyone else quietly moves up.

Probably a fairer way of insuring that you eat with your friends would be to enter the line at the same time they do.

It's doubtful whether the bread-line system of eating in Ath will ever be perfected, but if working for your meals helps, appetites will flourish.

New Key clique officers are James Hugo, chairman, and Shirley Ann Fink, secretary. Next meeting for all clique members will be held in 309 Old Main at 8 p.m. April 4, according to Miss Fink.

Just a G. I. Seamstress?

If you're forever getting out the needle and thread, here are some tips:

When a button comes off, sew it on well the first time. A slipshod job just means you'll have to do it over again soon.

Make your next shirt an Arrow. Arrow buttons are attached with a patented stitch, which "anchors" them to a shirt.

Check your size—you may be wearing too small a shirt and therefore causing too great a strain on the buttons and seams. The Sanforized label in an Arrow shirt guarantees shrinkage no greater than 1%—no danger of an Arrow ever getting too small!
