

Penn Statements

By SERENE ROSENBERG

Interesting to note is the experiment of a certain psychologist pointed out by Dr. Adams in one of his classes recently. Curious about just what topics most often comprise conversations on the street, this gentleman followed persons up and down city streets, always at a close enough distance to enable him to overhear the conversations. His results when tabulated show that young women discuss men and clothes more than anything else; young men, business and women. Old men discuss business and sports; old women, still—men and clothes.

Does the Shoe Fit? . . .

Since one of the customs of our civilization, or civilization as we know it at college, deems that shoes be worn, four and a half coeds hesitate even now to greet the month of May minus shoes. Even now, because up until the recent Players' show they too had saddles for campus wear. When earnest playerettes approached them, however, and asked for the loan of a pair of saddles, they joined in the fun and spent the next week admiring their offspring from the other side of Crmm. glass. Now, though, the fun's over. Someone, and rumor shakes its suspicious finger at the armed forces, lifted four and a half pairs, nine shoes in all, from the Crmm. display and made off with them. Of course, it was all in cinderella spirit, and if these same shoes started a once-upon-the-time love affair all well and good. No objections there, but for gosh sakes! Ration coupons are hard to get, State College has a minimum of black marketers, and won't you please drop the shoes off at the Players' offices in Schwab pronto.

Station XEW, Please . . .

State College radio reception makes this practically impossible but it's nice to think about anyway. Down Mexico way "El Colegio del Amor de Glostora" (translated it means "College of Love") comes over the air every Thursday to the theme melody of Liebestraum. Report has it that what

Wildlife Management Prof Attends Chicago Meeting

Dr. Pennoyer F. English, associate professor of wildlife management at the College, will attend the ninth annual North American Wildlife Conference in Chicago April 24 to 26.

Dr. English was recently re-elected secretary of the National Wildlife Society and will attend that meeting also.

Conservationists and game managers from many parts of the nation will discuss technical and general problems of conservation, management, administration and other matters.

Drop-add refunds are ready at the Bursar's office. Students may secure them by calling there during regular office hours.

Have you found a satisfying answer to your own quest for religious truth?

follows is not a letdown from the all-inclusive title, because four calf-eyed contestants relay their verbal aspirations into the microphone. Although meant for their one love, all of Mexico can listen in. Contestants are male and female students, store clerks, soldiers, and industrial workers, and while many remain anonymous except for their initials, a few have given not only their own name but that of the other party.

Fancy Meeting You . . .

Eating dinner out the other night to avoid a continuous run of dormitory food, we sighted one of the dorm hostesses dining alone at an adjacent table. Pardon, madam, nice for a change, wasn't it!

Before You Holla . . .

At the risk of a great many attacks it seems like a good idea to start our own "class of the week" club. Each semester we watch dubious students schedule classes that meet at the right hour or give the needed number of credits. Because there are some really good courses given, it seems like a good idea to jot them down here intermittently for the benefit of those who will be around long enough to worry about another schedule. So, sticking our necks out, we'll start the ball rolling with a soc course—Sociology 19, "Race Relations and Nationality Groups." Dealing with racial and minority groups in the modern world, we believe it a course worth putting in your future-book. Guaranteed to make you think and one of the "here you learn something" courses. Remember this next time you need to fill some hours and as we learn about them we'll suggest a few others.

Battle talk!

Battle Talk! . . . that is what he handles on this portable switchboard. Close behind our advancing troops, he holds the life lines of men in combat. Through these lines, flow reports from outposts, orders from command posts—helping to win objective after objective on the road to Victory, Home and Peace.

As the nation's largest producer of electronic and communications equipment for war, Western Electric is supplying vast quantities of telephone and radio apparatus for use on land, at sea and in the air. Many college graduates—both men and women—are playing important roles in this vital work.
