Druids Haze Two Frosh

In an attempt to revive Penn State spirit through hazing, a group of Druids and independent upperclassmen Sunday night apprehended two freshmen, Francis Felder and Carl Tendler, and forcibly shaved their heads and painted their faces.

According to Tribunal Chairman Howard Milliken, this action was an infringement on Tribunal's rights and that body disclaims any responsibility for the affair.

Druids, only recently revived to an active status, previously announced that its goal was to regain its former strength on campus and that one of its interests was laxness of Freshman Tribunal.

Tribunal met Wednesday to review the case. Recommendations will be sent to the administration, which will have final jurisdiction over the matter, according to Milliken.

'Claudia' Stars Child Bride Vs. British Wolf

Sprinkled liberally with a child bride (mentally), a Russian opera singer, a very British playwright and wolf, and a patient husband, "Claudia," Players second presentation of the semester, is scheduled to appear in Schwab Auditorium June 9 and 10.

"The theme of this play is the problem of adjustment to life, which Claudia undergoes. One factor in making "Claudia" a popular play, is that many people have had similar experiences," L. E. Tucker, director of the show said yesterday.

"In the first act, Claudia is a happy-go-lucky kid tied to her mother's apron strings. Her marriage, and expected baby require a change from her over-dependence upon her mother. Later, in the climax of the play, she must resign herself to the loss of her mother. This adjustment, and her subsequent maturity, provide a great deal of dramatic interest," Tucker added.

Rounding out the line-up of Players already working on the show, Bill Morton as assistant director, and Violet Grubin as prompter, were announced today.

Stop Destruction!

George W. Ebert, superintendent of Grounds and Buildings, called attention to the destruction of the glass plates in the campus lamps east of New Beaver Field. During the last month, members of the department have twice been called out to replace plates in almost every lamp along that path.

Post-War Group Suggests Counselor For Veterans

Appointment of a Faculty Counselor of Veterans and of a committee to advise and assist him in his duties has been recommended to President Ralph D. Hetzel by the College Committee on Post-War Planning.

As expressed by the committee in its first report, the duties of the counselor "shall be to assist veterans in taking the most advantageous use of existing agencies of the College, and to cooperate with these agencies in providing for veterans."

The advising committee, the report said, is not intended to take the place of or assume the duties of faculty advisers or of any existing College agencies.

In addition to the advising committee, the report said, appointment of a second group was suggested to survey the special guidance facilities of the College, to recommend whether they are adequate to assist veterans and other students, and to prepare a statement for faculty advisers describing the use of guidance facilities.

President Hetzel has already appointed the two committees. On the guidance survey committee
