

Noted Educators Adjourn Today

Dr. Powers Addresses Closing Clinic Session

To solve the problem of taking care of a wide range of reading abilities in one class, more than 500 educators from the East will meet in final session today. The conferees include school psychologists, remedial teachers, elementary and secondary classroom teachers, principals, and superintendents.

Dr. Levevia Powers of the Pennsylvania State Department of Public Instruction is among those who will speak today. At the conference-type seminars, Dr. Lee J. Brueckner of the University of Minnesota and May Lambert Becker of the Reader's Guide, and the New York Herald Tribune are among those who have already spoken.

Ways and means of developing basic reading abilities have been determined largely at the Reading Clinic by Dr. E. A. Betts, director, and his associates.

"The scope of the problem is better understood," Dr. Betts said, "when one realizes that 25 per cent of all public school children are seriously retarded because of reading difficulties which can be overcome."

Reading abilities in the fifth grade may range from pre-primer to 12th grade. "It's a mistake to give Johnny a fifth grade reader because he's in that grade."

Dr. Betts pointed out that forcing a child to read before he is ready may impede spelling, writing, in general education as well as creating personality problems. He advocates reading readiness tests.

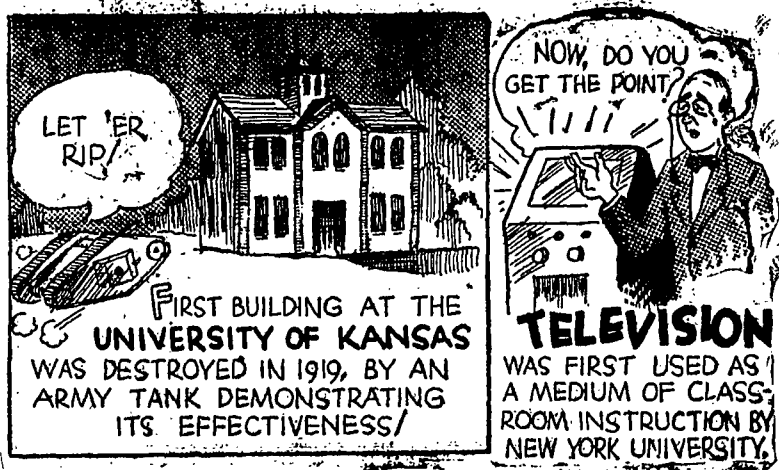

Freshman Women Vote For New Forum Officers

Freshman Women's Forum will hold elections in the Hugh Beaver Room, 7:30 p. m. Tuesday. Freshmen girls who fill in and return interest blanks by Friday afternoon will be eligible to vote.

The work of the Forum is planned by the members with the help of upperclassmen for the first weeks. Committees will be appointed by the executive Council, the week following election, and suggest a variety of activities covering a wide range of interest. These committees include worship, social activities, program, publicity, service, and membership.

Those nominated at the meeting Tuesday evening were: president, Rita Hanzlik, Phyllis James and Sally Vonnieda; vice-president, Carolyn Currier, Anne Dunaway, and Rene Kuntzleman; secretary, Jean Brenner, Ethlyn Clark, Mary Jane Rudy, and Prudy Stewart; treasurer, Marjorie Dunmyer, Anita Geiger, and Grace McMillen.

Worship chairman: Ruth Auchembach, Marjorie Rex, and Phyllis Schmelzle; and social chairman: Alice Malarkey, Shirley Matthews, Peggy McKnight, Betsy Ross, and Jackie Simkins.

Liang-mo Discusses Role Of China In World War II

"What is China's role in the war? She has held back the Japs for eight years, preventing them from dividing the country," Lui Liang-mo, former Chinese Army morale officer, told approximately 300 students, faculty members, and townspeople at a lecture in Schwab Auditorium Wednesday night.

"Her people have built entirely by hand the largest airfields in the world from mud, sand, rocks, and water. Her students are studying agriculture, engineering, medicine in order to be of some help after the war in rebuilding a new democracy," continued the speaker. "This has been accomplished only through blood, tears, sweat, and determination."

Liang-mo traced development of World War II from its beginning in 1931 when Japan invaded Manchuria through Mussolini's capture of Ethiopia, Hitler's rise to power, and the Munich treaty.

"Fascists cannot be satisfied, but what a price we paid to learn that," he stated.

The militarist said that before the war China seemed mysterious and far away to the American people. The airplane has brought the countries together, continued Liang-mo, and the United States is now interested in China because she is an ally and because American soldiers are fighting alongside of the Chinese.

"The Chinese today are America's most reliable ally and after the war will be her most valuable friend," emphasized the speaker. "China is not finished. She is a weak, peace-loving, agricultural country, but when she starts to fight, she will fight to the end. China shall be free; China shall be a democracy."

"We are all children of the same God. Why should we quibble and doubt?" concluded Liang-mo. "The world of tomorrow shall be built upon the foundations of mutual love, collective security, mutual understanding; and that should begin with our children and students of today."

Liang-mo, characterized as "the man who taught China to sing," demonstrated his ability by singing the "March of Volunteers" for the audience.

He was graduated from Shanghai University with a bachelor of arts degree in sociology and did extensive work with the YMCA before doing graduate work at Crozer Theological Seminary and the University of Pennsylvania.

International Film Club Presents French Movie

"A Nous La Liberte," a French film with English subtitles, will be presented by the International Film club in 121 Sparks at 7 and 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Directed by Rene Clair, director of the several recent Hollywood successes, "I Married a Witch" and "It Happened Tomorrow," with music by Georges Auric. The latter is a ballad of the liberties not permitted by the modern world, either to its failures or its commercial successes.
