

Campus Cops' History Goes Back To The Good Old Days

Back in the good old days when Holmes field was just another vacant lot, the Campus Patrol received its first start. However, there were no "Campus Cops," just an aged, half-stooped watchman whose duty it was to care for the buildings. Nevertheless, it was here, long before the campus assumed its present form, that the foundation was laid for what is now the Campus Patrol.

Highly respected and often mentioned favorably, the Patrol was not always so. Once it was scorned and considered a joke; its members were laughed at and adjudged fools; and its power was limited to a few minor items. No longer do such conditions exist, for the Campus Patrol is now one of the most influential and honored organizations on the campus.

Although its authority is now far more extended than it ever was, the Patrol uses it far less than it ever did. Its patrolmen have become "men of right" instead of "men of might." The arrest and prosecution of individuals has become an obsolete function, and in its place has been substituted the correction of the wrong with beneficial value to the persons involved.

Dr. F. E. Christian Addresses Chapel

Dr. Frederick E. Christian, minister of the Covenant Central Presbyterian church in Williamsport, Pa., will address the Chapel audience Sunday on "A Time for True Greatness."

Graduating in 1929 from Wooster College, Wooster, Ohio, the Chapel speaker specialized in history at Princeton to obtain his M.A. degree. Princeton Theological Seminary ordained Dr. Christian in 1934, and he studied further at Gettysburg Seminary.

At Sing Sing Prison, the minister was assistant to the chaplain for two years. Dr. Christian was appointed pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Mechanicsburg, Pa., and accepted his present position two and a half years ago.

Young people's work throughout the pastorate has occupied most of the minister's spare time. Dr. Christian is chairman of the Young People's Committee of the Williamsport Presbytery and director of the Young People's Conference.

IFC Announces Annual Banquet

At the annual IFC pledge banquet in the State College Hotel, 7 p. m. August 13, Dr. Raymon Kistler, president of Beaver College, will speak. His topic will be "The Price of Peace."

Under a committee headed by Edward P. Zemprelli, Sigma Chi, and including John Seavey, Alpha Chi Sigma, Herbert Hasson, Phi Sigma Delta, and Bill Thomas, Phi Kappa Sigma, a complete program has been planned. It includes Dr. Kistler's speech, dinner, and lighter entertainment by members of the student body.

Tickets will sell at $1.50. Fraternities should turn in admissions for those who are to attend at the next IFC meeting. Mr. Zemprelli predicts that between 80 and 100 pledges will be present.

Dr. Kistler, a native of Allegheny County, spoke in Chapel July 12, 1942. He received his A. B. and D. D. degrees at Westminster College. Beaver College conferred an L.L.D. degree. He is also a member of Theta Phi, honorary fraternity.

Acting chairman will be Dr. Burke M. Herrmann, professor of history.

The Campus Patrol was first established in 1928 as a division of the department of grounds and buildings. It consisted of a captain and two patrolmen who did little more than check on the buildings and see that the students kept off the grass.

As the College grew and expanded socially as well as economically, the patrol kept pace with every move. As each year went by, more authority was given to the Patrol. By the end of 1930, the Patrol was being used as a protective measure against fire, as a control over traffic and as an influence for the general good behavior of the students. The following year, the Student Patrol was formed and the Regular Patrol enlarged. The expansion of the College was so great and so rapid that no other solution except enlargement of the Patrol could have possibly stemmed the need.

Today the Regular Patrol includes 13 men besides Capt. Philip A. Mark. There is a captain, a lieutenant and a night sergeant. The men patrol the campus grounds day and night. They work in shifts so that there is someone on the campus at all times. The Regular Patrol also has a police car fully equipped with a stretcher and first aid equipment. The car patrols the grounds at intervals throughout the day and night.

The Student Patrol consists of approximately 13 men. A student lieutenant, two sergeants, and two corporals assist Capt. Mark with the direction of this group. The remainder of the Student Patrol is composed of patrolmen.

The duties of the Patrol are to control traffic, direct crowds, and be helpful in any other possible way. The pay is not high but it has helped many students in need of money to complete their college education.

Capt. Mark, who has been with the Patrol since 1936, states that positions as student patrolmen are still open to all male students. The draft and unsettled college conditions have created a wide gap in the ranks of the Patrol. He also would like to remind the student body that the familiar blue uniform of the "Campus Cop" is synonymous with "help and justice."

Dr. Hutchinson Warns Against State Socialism For Post-War Security

Warning that increased government control of business and industry will eventually result in state socialism, Dr. K. D. Hutchinson of the College today urged restoration of the old system of open competition to insure post-war security.

"If federal agencies continue to control business and regulate supply and demand, this nation will have the type of government we're fighting against," the Penn State economist explained.

Claiming that open competition provided the nation with the soundest economic system in its history, Dr. Hutchinson declared: "It's time that we start letting the business man run his own business again."

While favoring abolition of government regulations, Dr. Hutchinson agreed that a gigantic program of government spending may be necessary to ward off postwar depression.

"There's nothing wrong with government spending," he said, "if the money is used for necessary purposes and not doled out on a charity basis. Funds should be used to aid small business men, and to build hospitals, schools, and better homes."

French Underground To Gather Momentum As Allies Drive Ahead

The French underground will gather momentum as the Allies advance, in the opinion of Dr. J. B. Cloppet of the College, who believes a majority of the new French political leaders will emerge from this movement.

Dr. Cloppet, who served in World War I with the French Blue Devils and later, as an American Army interpreter, also expressed his personal conviction that France will return to a democratic form of government following the war.

"For the past few years," he explained, "the postwar type of government has been a leading topic in French underground papers. When a nation has suffered as much as France," he added, "the masses will demand a maximum of freedom and of private initiative."

College Works On Problem Of Returning Servicemen

Penn State has already started to work on the problem of placing returning service men in suitable jobs, according to an article on the editorial page of this week's Saturday Evening Post.

The article analyzes the work of the Veterans' Counselling Committee of Altoona with which the department of psychology and education has been cooperating. The job of the committee is to help returning service men re-establish themselves in civilian life.

"Dumped back into civilian life," the committee explains, "these boys will have to make the most important decisions of their lives—and make them right away. Among these decisions will be the selection of a life's vocation. Obviously, with their 18-year-old civilian experience, they will need help. That's why we plan to help them from the day they return, until they're fitted into a job that will give them a reasonable degree of happiness."

This help is to come from business and professional people of Altoona who will interview the returning men, and make suggestions as to the type of civilian work they are best fitted for, or what college they should attend in case they want to return to school.

Here is where Penn State steps into the picture. If the interviewers are to make the best possible decisions, they must know every detail of the correct methods of interviewing. They were taught these methods by professors from the College. Along with Dean M. R. Trabue, who worked out the course, Dr. B. V. Moore and Dr. Clifford R. Adams, both of the psychology department, conducted six weeks of evening classes in the art of interviewing. Not only did Penn State's profs do the teaching, but the classes were held in the Penn State Undergraduate Center.

Mr. Miles F. Hollister, who conceived the plan, was assisted in getting the idea under way by Robert Eiche, head of the Altoona Undergraduate Center; J. Ewing Kennedy, area supervisor of extension; and George Leetch of the College Placement Service.

In discussing the classes, the Post stated, "There were no Freudian or other mysteries in the lectures; only the kind of practical information that a lot of businessmen will need when they advise young men on picking a job."

The lectures are now over and permanent offices are being opened in the Undergraduate Center. The committee expects to be ready for business in about two weeks as soon as the new quarters are furnished.

New Director Elected

I. C. Boerlin, supervisor of audio-visual aids in the College extension services, has been elected to the board of directors of the Educational Film Library Association and has been appointed to the State Council of Education Postwar Committee on Teaching Aids.

As a director of the Educational Film Library Association, Boerlin will be one of two directors representing 33 state universities and land grant colleges.

He was one of 12 members named by Dr. Francis B. Haas, State superintendent of public instruction, to the Postwar Committee on Teaching Aids.

BUILDING DONORS

Only two buildings on the College campus have been donated by single individuals—Schwab auditorium, gift of Charles M. Schwab, and Carnegie hall, given by Andrew Carnegie.

Tense . . . Treacherous . . . Terrifying . . .

LADIES IN

RETIREMENT

A Players Production

SCHWAB AUD.

8 P.M.

AUG. 11 and 12

ADMISSION 55c

WHERE TO DINE AND DANCE

THIS WEEKEND

THE CAMPUS RESTAURANT

REAL ITALIAN SPAGHETTI at the CROSSROADS RESTAURANT

- Steak Dinners
- Beer

BOALSBURG Call 2721

FOR . . .

- Steak Dinners
- Spaghetti
- Beer
- Wines
- Liquors

Come To

THE HOFBRAU

AIR CONDITIONED Bellefonte, Pa.

New

College

Diner

Between the Movies