Old Mania

By NANCY CARASTRO

The pinning of the weeds is that of Fay Young to tall, dark and likeable Ed Williams, alpha zeta and eighth semester secretary-treasurer . . . Fay is an example of the beautiful but not dumb type, combining Cwens, Alpha Lambda Delta, PSCA, Collegian, politics and a consistent dean's list average . . . nice work if you can do it . . .

Couldn't Stay Away . . .
 Ted Rubin, former Collegian reporter and frosh politico, was haunting the Crm. the beginning of this week . . . Ted has just completed boot training at Bainbridge, the place V-12ers have nightmares about . . . Ens. Oliver Bryant visited Florence Prushinski last weekend . . . Prue has the role of Sister Teresa in the forthcoming "Ladies in Retirement" . . . Ray Zaroda, former IMA president is back doing research . . . He can be found at Paterson Hall any odd hour of the day . . . Peggy Quick, Dolly Briner, and Dotty Lamb, a delta gamma trio, spent the weekend here . . . Rita Belfonti, Theta Phi Alpha exprexy, decided to spend the weekend here too, but she couldn't tear herself away. She wrote for more money, bought cigarettes and movie magazines, and is now living the life of a "sport" in her sorority sisters' clothes . . . Dick Marsh, former Collegian ad manager, is in town . . .

Riding Club Offers Hours Of Fun; Seeks Members

A lot of people on campus, especially freshmen, know little and care less about the Penn State Riding Club. Once or twice a semester they see scattered posters in town or on dormitory bulletin boards.
 They glance at these and then forget about them. They seem disinterested and yet many of them when addressed in private conversation will confess, "I'd really like to know how to ride" or "I used to when I was a kid but I sort of got out of the habit. Gee, it was fun."

That in itself shows that there is interest no matter how latent it may be. It's logical that if these people had a little information to go on, their interest could be pepped up to an actuality.

The present club was reorganized in 1939 and has been progressing steadily ever since. It now has its own stable, paddock, and riding ring, located on the hill east of Atherton Hall, not to mention its four horses. Several other horses owned by various members of the club are also kept in the stable. A number of faculty members are enthusiasts and backers of the club. Dr. Howard S. Coleman of the physics department is the advisor and Dr. Charles G. Stewart, a State College dentist, is in charge of instruction.

The money angle, a primary factor to most students, is very encouraging. Membership costs $15 per semester and covers a minimum of 20 hour and a half rides. If the horses are not too much in demand, the members may ride as much "overtime" as they wish.

Every member must be able to pass a riding test before he or she is permitted to take a horse out of the ring. After the test is passed there is virtually no limit to the places one can go. Right now early morning and late evening rides on the trails back of Ag Hill are especially popular.

The club invites anyone with even a little bit of interest to "come out and look the situation over."

Insect Specimens From Pacific Islands On Display In Library

An exhibit of unusual insects from various islands of the Pacific has been arranged by the department of zoology-entomology under the direction of Stuart W. Frost, professor of entomology, and placed in the lobby of the second floor of the Library. Some of the insects are displayed on a large map of the Pacific especially prepared for this purpose.

Emphasis is placed on the species occurring on those islands which have been recently prominent in the news. These islands are well known for their abundant insect life, especially colorful butterflies, many of which are displayed in this exhibit.

Those in the service who have been stationed on some of the Pacific islands have been amazed by the abundance and variety of the insects they have seen. All contribute to the unusual nature of the exhibit, for many of them are rare or new to science and few have common names.

A number of servicemen have taken time out to collect specimens and send them back to State College. The exhibit features some insects collected recently in the Solomon Islands by Major William B. Gibson, a former pre-medical student.

This exhibit is expected to be of great interest to servicemen on the campus as well as to citizens who have relatives or friends in the various armed forces. The map itself should help some to orient themselves in a heretofore little known area of the globe.

Call for Cheerleaders

With football season at hand, all coeds and fellows interested in cheerleading should report Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday at 7 p.m. on Old Main lawn, it was announced by head cheerleader, Guy Newton.

Preliminary practice with instruction will begin then and will last for about three weeks.
