

Frosh On Dates Must Wear All Customs, Barkley Orders

Freshmen have been dating for one week, and now Lloyd Barkley, Tribunal chairman has an ominous note to inject into the proceedings. Freshmen are required to wear the full customs, consisting of green dink, white socks, freshman handbook, and matches, on all dates, he warns.

Tribunal requests the co-operation of all upperclassmen, with special emphasis on hat societies and their members, in helping to enforce these customs, Barkley said. Not one freshman violator's name has been left at Student Union the past week, he said.

Nevertheless, at the weekly meeting Wednesday night, Tribunal tried and punished three frosh, including its favorite freshman offender, Robert Kagan. Kagan, up before Tribunal for the third time was found guilty of not wearing white socks and will be seen on campus with knee-length white stockings embellished with pink garters.

Dick Toller, who was convicted of wearing no customs on a date, will wear a bushel basket painted green to look like a dink, in addition to a sandwich sign advertising finals week.

Dragging a tin can attached to his belt, wearing his clothes backwards, carrying a flag on a stick, and having his ears kept warm with two dangling pieces of toast, was the punishment levied on freshman Al Diamond. His crimes were carrying another student's Bible, and being disrespectful when questioned by an upperclassman.

Finish of European War Will Not Improve Civilian Supply of Gas, Rubber

The end of the European war will not alleviate the present shortage in gas and rubber immediately, Amos E. Neyhart of the College warned today, in appealing for continued observance of war-inspired conservation measures.

Professor Neyhart, administrative head of the Institute of Public Safety at the College and consultant on road training for the American Automobile Association, said "the military will need all the gas and rubber they can get" for the Pacific war.

"This is no time to forego rules and regulations," the Penn State expert cautioned, adding "we will all return to a peacetime basis faster if we observe wartime precautions."

Professor Neyhart, who has just returned from a three-month teaching trip to the West Coast, will emphasize conservation and safety when supervisors of the nation's motor vehicle fleets meet at the College September 11 to 16 for their sixth annual short course.

Dr. Taylor Speaks In Chapel Sunday

"A Great Time to Live" is the topic of the address to be delivered in Chapel Sunday by Dr. Harry B. Taylor, First Presbyterian Church, Syracuse, N. Y.

Dr. Taylor graduated from Glenville State Teachers College in 1931. During his junior year he was chairman of the Middle Atlantic Field Council for the student YMCA and during his senior year was chairman of the National Council of Student Christian Associations.

From 1931 to 1934 Dr. Taylor was field secretary for the Student Christian Association Movement in New England and secretary of the National Preparatory School Committee, conducting religious work in preparatory schools and colleges and directing student conferences.

In the summer of 1933 the clergyman traveled to Europe to represent the Student Christian Association Movement of the United States at international student conferences in England, Germany, and Switzerland. Union Theological Seminary in New York ordained Dr. Taylor in 1936. While at the seminary he served with the Rye Presbyterian Church.

Brick Presbyterian Church in New York City was Dr. Taylor's first pastorate. On September 1, 1939 he was invited to his present post at the First Presbyterian Church in Syracuse.

The choir, directed by Mrs. Wila Taylor, will sing "Praise" by Rowley.

Hoffman Discloses Ratio Of Graduates Increases 12-to-1

There are twelve graduates today for every one graduate of the College during the first years of the institution's founding, a study by Registrar William S. Hoffman disclosed today.

His research disclosed that it required 73 years, from 1855 to 1928, for the College to graduate its first 10,000 students. It took nine years for the second 10,000 to graduate, and only six years for the third 10,000 to earn their degrees.

The total number of degrees conferred from the founding of the College up to and including the 21st summer session commencement on August 4 of this year was 20,987, of which 26,665 were bachelor degrees, 3541 master's degrees, 336 technical degrees, and 445 doctorates.

Registrar Hoffman said the number of degrees conferred on men reached 24,669 in August of this year. The number conferred on women during this same period was 6,318.

Dietz Asks for Pictures

More information concerning La Vie pictures has been released by Fred Dietz, editor of La Vie.

The year book is being made up for this semester and next. All campus organizations should have group pictures taken at their own expense, as there are no La Vie funds available for this purpose. These pictures will be collected by La Vie sometime during the next semester.

Immediate co-operation from all groups is urged.

Attention, Seniors

There will be a meeting for eighth semester students in 318 Old Main, 7 p.m. Thursday to discuss plans for class day, picnic, and graduation.

General Eisenhower Takes Orders From Penn State Graduate

Probably the only flight officer to give orders to General Dwight D. Eisenhower is Jerome A. Freedman, '38, member of Beta Sigma Rho.

It happened in North Africa where the Wilkes-Barre flight officer was detailed to fly America's top European commander on a non-combat mission. General Eisenhower was curious about the operation of the plane, so Flight Officer seated the commander in front of the controls.

For the next few minutes, the four-star general, like any fledgling flyer, obeyed Freedman's orders.

Other dignitaries the pilot transported during 20 months in the European and American theatres include General Sir Andrew Cunningham, Br stihl W Pj. ningham, British chief of naval operations, and General Sir Harold Alexander, commander of Allied ground forces in Italy.

Flight Officer Freedman has been sent to Army Air Forces Redistribution Station No. 2 in Miami Beach, Florida, for a medical examination. The alumnus will be assigned to another duty for which he is best fitted.

76 New Reservists Arrive On Campus

Arrival of 76 new reservists Tuesday will boost to 328 the number of student-soldiers now enrolled at the College for special instruction under the Army Specialized Training Program.

The reservists, including 50 from the Air Corps Reserve, are 17-year-olds who will go to camps for basic military training when they reach their 18th birthdays. The 17-year-olds now on the campus number 129.

Since the ASTP program was first started at State in May 1943, approximately 1500 men have been schooled in electrical, mechanical, civil, chemical, and basic engineering. A few have also pursued pre-dental and pre-medical work.

More than 6000 have been trained for specialized tasks at the College since the various military and naval programs were first instituted in January 1941. At the present time nearly 1000 are enrolled in the ASTP and Navy V-12 programs.

Two College Herd Cows Set Butterfat Record

Two registered Holstein-Friesian cows in the College dairy herd have recently completed official records of more than 600 pounds of butterfat, announces The Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

Penstate Inka Doris was the higher producer of the two with a record of 707 pounds of butterfat and 17,933 pounds of milk. This is nearly four times the production of the average dairy cow in this nation. The record was made in 305 days on four milkings daily and at the age of six years, five months.

Penstate Veeman Josie was the other high producer with 634 pounds of butterfat and 18,402 pounds of milk, made in 305 days on four milkings daily and at the age of ten years, seven months.

Alumni Number 35,000

Alumni Association at present mails news of campus events and of former Penn Staters to 30,000 graduates and approximately 5,000 who did not complete their education.

September issue of Penn Stater, a four-page newspaper, is mailed to the alumni four times a year. The magazine, Alumni News, which is published seven times a year, will be released in October.

'Daddy' Groff Teaches Chinese But Learns From Them As Well

G. W. "Daddy" Groff, until recently dean of the College of Agriculture at Lingnan University in Canton, China, told approximately 60 students and faculty members in Sparks Building Wednesday night that his heart was in China.

Through his close association with the Chinese people, the former Penn State student told the audience that he has grown to admire and respect the people. His motto, Daddy Groff said, has been to try to learn from the Chinese people as well as to teach them.

His results speak for themselves. Largely through the pioneering Daddy Groff has done for agriculture in China, the Ministry of Education has opened more agricultural schools. The entire country has been divided into ten regions, in each of which one agricultural college is to be set up. The fact that there are at present 27 agricultural schools, as compared to the 17 which existed before the war, testifies to the advancement China has made in this direction. In addition, there are now five agricultural research institutes which have been opened by various universities.

Tracing his interest in China to his first trip abroad, Daddy Groff, then a college sophomore, returned eager to do some work there. After three years of instructorship at Lingnan University, he got the vote of confidence he had been waiting for.

Various foundations interested in foreign education, chapel donations, and endowments helped Lingnan to expand. "But," Daddy said, "the Chinese have also done a great deal, more than the Americans. They have built buildings, endowed the school with facilities, and supported the university by paying a high fee for tuition."

With the Japanese invasion of Canton in 1938, the agricultural college was forced to relinquish its buildings for new quarters in Kwangtung province. Since then, a new location for the school has been found in Kukong, although considering the fighting now going on in this sector, it is likely that Lingnan will be on the move again.

Before the war the university boasted a number of Penn State students who were studying under the exchange plan. "It is a system," Daddy Groff ventured, "that we are anxious to continue after the war. It has proven invaluable both to the American students who have traveled abroad, and to the Chinese students who have come to Penn State to continue their education."

In the interests of horticulture, and his plan for exchanging plants with China, Daddy Groff instituted a Lingnan Plant Exchange Station in Sarasota, Fla. Through this, numerous plants have been sent to China, and Chinese plants have been raised and tested on Florida soil.

Following his talk, Daddy Groff showed slides of Chinese scenes, which he interspersed with some original poetic quotations, and some colored film of the Lingnan Plant Exchange Station in Florida.
