Deans Of Men And Women Say Welcome

DEAN ARTHUR R. WARNOCK

Make Most of College, Assert Warnock, Ray

Two people that every freshman eventually gets to know are Dean of Men Arthur R. Warnock and Dean of Women Charlotte E. Ray. It is for that reason that The Collegian today prints their welcome messages.

Dean Warnock's message follows:

"Freshmen have been entering this College for 85 years. Through four periods in these 85 years the nation was engaged in war. Therefore, being a Penn State freshman, even in times of war, is nothing new. It is, however, something new to the freshman, and should be regarded by the freshman as literally an opportunity of a lifetime.

"As a matter of necessity, the new freshmen should do first things first; that is, his first campus duties must be concerned with getting started. But, as he first steps on the campus, there should be an awareness in him that an unusual opportunity is opening for him—an opportunity to spend three to four formative years in stimulating surroundings, to fit himself for profitable living after college, and to make himself into an especially useful, patriotic citizen of his country. He can get that glimpse of his future if he looks for it in the campus environment, and if he does get it his college experience will be stimulating and satisfying.

"Good luck to the new Penn State freshmen!"

Dean Ray's message follows:

"Unlike Julius Caesar, your late friend of high school days, who divided all Gaul into three parts, I wish to make a two-fold division of my message to freshmen.

"First of all, we salute every young man for what he has done or will do for his country and for us. No words can express our gratitude to those who risk everything to retain for us the life, liberty, and happiness that we once accepted so lightly.

"Then for the women students the obligation is to help the war effort through every means presented on this campus, even at the sacrifice of time and money—a trifling sacrifice compared with the men's gift. Our parallel task is to build ourselves daily into thinking citizens, for the democracy given into our keeping was designed for those who 'think as men of action and act as men of thought'."

Hours Assigned To Frosh Women

From the office of the Dean of Women comes the reminder that during the first three weeks of classes all freshman women must be in their dormitories by 9:15 p. m. on week nights and 9:30 p. m. on weekends.

During this three week orientation period all freshman women are forbidden to associate with men. Association with men is defined as any conversation more than "hello."

All freshman women or women transfer students entering with a freshman status are required to begin wearing the regulation College customs decreed by Judicial, girls' law enforcing organization, at 8 a. m. Monday.

Regulation green hairbows are four inches wide and three-quarters of a yard long. Each freshman must also wear in plain sight a three by five inch name card with her name printed on it in heavy black letters one inch high.

Customs may be taken off Friday and Saturday at noon and all day Sunday. Judicial will announce the date for the final removal of the bows and cards later in the semester.

Register Now, Says Leetch

George N. P. Leetch, director of the College Placement Service, urges all students interested in part time employment to register with the College Placement Office, 204 Old Main, as soon as they have made out their schedules.

Seniors are reminded by Leetch to begin thinking about their after graduation jobs now rather than waiting to make working plans at the last minute. Because of the decreased enrollment, Leetch believes that there will be fewer company representatives visiting the campus this semester.

Heads of departments, school placement officers, and the College Placement Service, 204 Old Main, have much information about companies, job opportunities, and types of positions available. Students are urged by Leetch to make use of this job literature as soon as possible.

Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's national scholastic honorary, will sponsor a "How To Study" lecture in 121 Sparks, 7:30 p. m., November 6. Dr. C. C. Wagner, head of Lower Division, will speak at this time. All first semester coeds are directed to attend.

There are seven undergraduate schools of study at the College.

Lion Focuses State Spirit

As the starting point for pep rallies and as a general gathering place for students at times of special celebrations and occasions, the Lion Shrine has become symbolic of the spirit of Penn State.

The Shrine stands to the right of Recreation Hall and is placed in a landscaped setting. Recently, Tribunal decreed that all freshman men must pay homage at the Lion.

Hundreds of students watched Heinz Warneke, famed American sculptor, as he carved the Lion from Pennsylvania limestone. He had been chosen by the class of 1940, which donated the Shrine, because he had made a life study of animals.

Warneke prepared six plaster models from the mountain lions in the New York zoos. He then came to the College where he did the actual modeling of the Shrine in stone.

Although the Shrine has only been on campus for three years, it has become significant to alumni and students as the focal point of Penn State spirit.

The College is supported by certain grants from the federal government and appropriations by the state legislature, in addition to student fees.
