'Frosh May Date,'—Tribunal

"All freshman dating customs are now removed," Van Lundy, Tribunal chairman, announced at the meeting Wednesday.

The freshmen may also roll down their trousers and wear socks of colors other than white. All other customs must be observed until further notice.

Lundy also stated that the freshmen must wear the signs on the outside of their coats and all bent or torn signs should be replaced by new ones.

George "Texas" Colket didn't wear his customs when he dated. He will wear a fancy cowboy shirt, boots, corduroy skirt, and carry a water pistol in a holster. He will also wear make-up and decorate his ten-gallon hat with a large green bow.

Jack Bohm dated on Sunday. He will also wear a dress and make-up. His slip will hang three inches below his dress and he will wear a woman's hat. Bohm's shoes will have bells fastened to them, and in addition he will ring a large bell.

Karl Thompson, convicted of not wearing customs, came before Tribunal in green socks. He will roll his trousers to his knees and will have three two-inch stripes on each leg. Thompson will also beat cadence on a pot as he marches up the mall.

Robert Briselli, Gerhard Roth, Alfred Mussey, Casimir Sokolowski, Thaddeus Olszewski, Jacque Hogg, and Harry Klotz will wear sandwich signs because of miscellaneous offenses.

210 Penn State Alumni Reported Casualties

According to the latest list from the Alumni Association, 210 former students of the College are among the casualties of World War II. This number includes 142 killed in action, 41 missing, and 27 prisoners of war.

Since the Alumni Office depends on newspapers as the source of its information concerning former Penn Staters, Hugh R. Riley Jr., assistant executive secretary of the Alumni Association, is asking students reading their hometown papers to clip and bring any information about the College's alumni to the Alumni Office, 104 Old Main. He urges that students seek other news as well as names appearing on casualty lists.

During the meeting, members selected the design for the club key and lapel pin. Jess Panar was elected to the junior service office.

The X-G-I Club has been entered in the IMA basketball tournament and is now organizing a team.

The executive committee will meet in 318 Old Main 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Next meeting of all members is scheduled for 405 Old Main 7:30 p.m. December 19.
