Gay 90s Theme Highlights Engineer's Slide Rule Ball

The third annual Slide Rule ball, sponsored by the Penn State Engineer, will be held in Recreation Hall from 8 to 12 o'clock tomorrow night.

The dance will carry out a gay 90s theme. Cardboard murals of stereoptican slides, showing couples riding tandems, barber poles, shaving mugs, and women in gay 90s dress, will hang throughout Recreation Hall. The color scheme for decorations will be chartreuse and fuschia.

Music, provided by the Campus Owls, will be primarily gay 90s waltzes and slow numbers, carrying out the theme of the dance.

The Honey Boys, traditionally known on the campus as the men's chorus that used to serenade girls' dormitories, will sing during the dance. Other entertainment will be provided by Sidney Friedman and Audrey Kreger, who will do a "black-face" act.

Booths may be ordered from Lynn Robinson, chairman of the dance, by phoning either the Engineer office, 2 Armory, or Miss Robinson, second floor north, McAllister Hall.

Speech Department Sets Oratorical Contest

The department of speech will sponsor the All-College Speaking Contest May 18, it was announced today by Clayton H. Schug, associate professor of speech. Seventy-five dollars in prizes will be awarded.

The event, which has been held each year at the College for over 60 years, was originally a junior oratorical contest, and later was limited to sophomore extemporaneous speakers. For the past several years the contest has been open to all undergraduate students with the exception of previous winners.

The College will award the $50 first prize and Forensic Council $25 as second prize.

At the preliminary meeting to be held May 10, contestants select their topics and are assigned to elimination sections. The contestants will deliver five minute speeches at the elimination sections slated for May 14. Successful speakers then will prepare eight to ten minute speeches to deliver in the final contest.

The committee in charge includes Mrs. Harriet Nesbitt, George P. Rice, and Clayton H. Schug, members of the speech department, and Bernice Greenes, undergraduate member of the committee.

Cabinet Plans Judicial Revision

3 Parties Seek Frosh Vote

Radicals Enter Race For Cabinet Positions

Freshman politics took on added interest with the entrance of a third party, the Radical Party, into the campaign. The new All-College party will compete with the established Key and Nittany parties for the offices of president and treasurer of the frosh class.

Frosh will cast their ballots in Old Main's first floor lounge from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Candidates for president are Ott Wendel, Key; George Harter, Nittany; and Wally Davis, Radical. Competing for the treasurer's post are Barbara Stark, Key; Shirley Herold, Nittany; and Jim Holtzinger, Radical.

The Elections Committee will meet candidates and clique chairmen in 418 Old Main 8 p.m. Tuesday. They will meet again after the polls close Wednesday in 305 Old Main to count votes and mete out penalties.

Party platforms follow:

Key Party Platform

We of the Key Party have set as our goal and project for this semester, a "get-acquainted" policy with respect to the frosh class and its activities. We will strive to accomplish this by a program of integrated steps, of which the following are prominent:

1. We intend to bolster the spirit of the freshman class for the College by:

a. Class meetings if they are in accord with the opinion of the students.

b. A fuller cooperation between freshmen and upperclassmen, and more important support by them at school functions.

c. Setting up a program for holding occasional freshman sings, hikes, picnics and mixers.

2. Investigation of living conditions in frosh town dorms and presentation of this report to the proper authorities.

3. We shall strive to reinstate "Move-Up Day," a day set aside for contests between the freshman and sophomore class to determine the duration of customs.

We will, however, be unable to accomplish this program unless we Formerly a professor of political science at Williams College, Lerner has a Ph.D. degree from the Robert Brookings Graduate School of Economics and Government. He was formerly editor of "The Nation," and assistant editor of the Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences.

Lerner is the author of the following books: "It Is Later Than You Think," "Ideas Are Weapons," "Ideas for the Ice Age," "The Mind and Faith of Justice Holmes," and "Public Journal."

Committee Suggests Changes in Elections

A complete reorganization of the student judicial system was advocated by the Constitution Revision committee in a report to All-College Cabinet Tuesday evening.

Plans for the redistribution of votes and ex-officio positions on Cabinet and the establishment of definite election dates for each semester were among the other times recommended by the committee.

It was suggested that Judicial be brought under All-College Cabinet to parallel Tribunal in an attempt to coordinate men and women's judicial activities.

Judicial Cooperation

Under the present system Student Tribunal is appointed by Cabinet, while the Judicial Committee is governed by WSGA. Instead of working together, the judicial bodies work independently of each other.

The Constitution Revision committee, which includes Victor Danilov, chairman, Charles Alcorn, Michael Lynch, Betty Shenk, and Evelyn Wasson, purposed that Tribunal and Judicial each be composed of eight members—two representatives from the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth semesters.

Members of the judicial bodies would be appointed for two semesters and would be responsible to All-College Cabinet, which represents the men and women students.

'Dumbarton Plan Similar To League' States Selsam

"The Dumbarton Oaks plan is really very similar to the League of Nations, except for a few changes in names here and there," stated Dr. J. Paul Selsam, professor of European history, who participated in the College Forum panel discussion in the Hugh Beaver Room at 4:15, Wednesday.

Dr. Charles C. Peters, professor of education, chairman of the meeting on "Issues of the San Francisco Security Conference," led the discussion by directing questions to the panel members, who included Rev. Robert Eads, pastor of the Baptist Church; Harold Griffith, student and veteran of the present war; Mrs. Charles C. Peters; Prof. J. Paul Selsam; Dr. Jacob Tanger, professor of political science.

"How did the conference come about?" Dr. Tanger was questioned.

"At Moscow it was agreed to call a council to plan a scheme of world organization," explained Dr. Tanger. "This culminated in the meeting of Dumbarton Oaks and the Yalta conference. There should be at least 39 nations represented at San Francisco next week."

The main points to be considered at the security conference, the professor continued, will include the maintaining of international peace and security, development of friendly international relations, achievement of international cooperation, and the providing of a meeting place for the achievement of these common ends.

Dr. Selsam pointed out the similarities and differences of the current plan as compared to the League of Nations. The important differences, he explained, are that the new plan is not tied up with the peace treaties, the general assembly has less power than in the League, a nation can be temporarily suspended for going against rules instead of being expelled permanently, and no provision is made for the withdrawal of a nation. There will also be greater emphasis on social and economic matters.

The chairman asked Reverend Eads his opinions on the voting procedures.

"Each member state will have one vote in the general assembly," explained the pastor. "Great Britain will have six; Russia, three; and the United States, three. This set-up of voting will handicap the smaller nations."

Mrs. Peters demonstrated the workings of the security conference by the use of a chart, and pointed out that many conditions not written in the plan will be discussed at the conference. They will include military control and social conditions.

Mr. Griffith commented on the power of the proposed organization and outlined the method of control.

"I don't think the organization has too much power," Mr. Griffith emphasized. "Any plan submitted will be a good one if it is carried out."
