

ISC Promotes Cooperation For Benefit of Members

(Editor's Note—This is the ninth in a series of articles concerning the organization of prominent campus groups. It is published in conjunction with the new All-College Cabinet movement to foster more school spirit.)

Independent Student Committee, made up of representatives from Independent Men's Association, Independent Women's Association, Penn State Club, and Philotes, strives to secure cooperative effort in carrying out the purposes of its individual member groups.

It also promotes functions that encourage cooperation of the group and projects that are beneficial to all independent students at the College.

Membership of ISC embraces all students represented by its member organizations. The executive members of each of these organizations make up membership of the council. The independent men's and independent women's representatives on All-College Cabinet are ex-officio members of ISC.

Council is the legislative body of ISC, and the executive committee performs administrative duties.

Officers of the Committee, including a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, social chairman and historian, are elected three weeks before the close of each semester, one week after nominations. Nominations from the floor may be made by old and new members of council.

Only members of council are eligible for administrative positions. Each organization must be represented by at least one member on the administrative committee. New council members elect the new administrative committee.

Each of the four organizations making up ISC has seven votes on any matter that comes before the group. Any individual member clubs that do not have seven members on their executive board elect sufficient members to the ISC council to complete the total. Members may vote by proxy through submission of a formal letter stating the reason for their absence, though council has the right to accept or reject the eligibility of the proxy vote.

Any member of council or the administrative committee may be recalled by a vote of council if he misses four consecutive meetings. The quorum necessary for transaction of business of the organization consists of more than one-half of the members of council.

At the end of the school year, any fund accumulated by ISC is divided between their checking account and sinking fund. The amount of division is decided upon by council.

ISC recently voted to give an award of $50 a semester to one independent student. The award, presented every two semesters to a different person, is given on the basis of scholarship and need.

Officers of ISC this semester are: Salvatore Rocci, president; Louis Plotnick, vice-president; Audrey Peters, secretary; Mary Lou Harman, treasurer; Jack Dickstein, historian; and Robert Barefoot, social chairman.

Placement

3 To Interview

Representatives from two companies and one from the Women's Army Corps will interview students next week, according to George N. P. Leetch, director of College Placement Service. Arrangements should be made in 204 Old Main.

Monday — H. H. Burrell of the Federal Telephone & Radio Corporation will interview seniors majoring in chemical, mechanical, and electrical engineering, commerce and finance, and physics.

Tuesday — Cpl. Alice McPhetridge of Women's Army Corps will talk to senior coeds. Those with a background in physical education or any of the sciences may apply for physical therapy school which leads to a commission if successfully completed. Coeds may also see Corporal McPhetridge any Tuesday afternoon at the Post Office Building.

Thursday — Miss Roberta Aylor of the Liberty Mutual Life Insurance Company will interview senior coeds.

PSCA Schedules Weekend Events

A Freshman cabin party will be held at the Penn State Christian Association cabin this weekend, leaving the rear of Old Main at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

The program will include square dancing and hiking. Although the limit is 40, there are a number of reservations available. Meal tickets are 60 cents. Reservations must be made and tickets bought at the PSCA office before noon tomorrow.

The First and Second Semester clubs will hold a picnic with a treasure hunt and softball game at Fairmount Park Monday evening. The group will leave the rear of Old Main at 5:30 p. m. Tickets may be bought for 35 cents at the PSCA desk. The Second Semester club will not meet Tuesday evening.

PSCA is anxious to have volunteers among students who will be here during the summer semester to help with freshman welcome plans. Those interested should apply at the office.

Mrs. Robert Eades will speak to the Upperclass club Friday at 7:30 p. m. She will talk on the subject "Can We Pray Today." The meeting will be held in the Hugh Beaver Room.

Foreign students are invited to attend a cabin party next Friday and Saturday. The group will leave from the back door of Old Main, at 5:30 p. m. Friday. Reservations should be made in 304 Old Main.

Letter To Editor

To Collegian Editor:
May I say about six sentences on the topic of freshman customs?

I believe in organized freshman orientation, because freshmen will be oriented willy nilly and I prefer the organized kind.

Forms of freshman orientation have changed many times in the College's history, and I think the time has again come for a material change. The purpose back of this old Penn State tradition is educational, and the current system is no longer educational.

With the coming to the campus of many war veterans as freshmen, freshman orientation should be of a kind that will fit their needs and experiences as well as the needs of teen-age freshmen right out of high school. Both types will need orientation in Penn State ways and traditions; and neither can be exempted without destroying class unity.

Finally, now is the time for all thoughtful students to make the needed changes.

Navy V-12 News

Whites may be nice and cool to wear, but the man who devised them must have forgotten that they need washing five minutes after they're put on. Here at the College with the laundry going at full capacity even during the winter it looked as though we'd all be cleaning our own till the USO stepped in and offered to help out. Orchids once again to the USO.

Lieutenant (j.g.) Kimball, now Lieutenant (s.g.) Kimball as of May 1, is spending a well earned leave in his beloved Texas. The new Hash marked pharmacist mate in ship's company is Edward Ohman, PM 1/c, a prewar sailor with experience throughout the United States and Ireland. Helping out in the athletic department is Jimmie Hartshorn, Sp. (A) 3/c, formerly of Bainbridge, Md.

The fellows of the unit were really sorry to see Dick Kucel and Bob Stitt leave; we all wish them the best of luck at Great Lakes and the service schools afterward. The same good wishes go to Bill Hengstenberg, whose eyes just weren't up to par in the recent Naval Air Corps physical, and Gordon Juneau, who broke one of the big rules of V-12 by getting married before being commissioned.

as Barracks 26 prepares for its semester house party. It's to be a hillbilly affair complete with ultra-informal clothes and hillbilly music. Meanwhile Barracks 37 is planning a barracks dance the same night in the usual more formal style just across the street.

The man of the week this time is Bill McMaster, present officer in charge of Barracks 9 and holder of the navy good conduct medal. Bill, who has served with the Navy for more than 38 months, spent most of his time as a fireman 1/c on an LCT in the Pacific area.

While participating in the landings at Lae and Finschaven on the New Guinea coast he was exposed to severe Japanese strafing and saw two of his buddies fall under the fire. At another time while serving at his battle station as gun pointer he scored a hit on a twin-engined Jap bomber.
