Navy V-12 News

While orchids aren't customarily presented by this column, a great big one should go this week to Bob Rust, who, helped by Jim Shanks and Glen Shaw, made Bks. 9's Club Barbary Coast dance a roaring success. Not only were the Bloomer Girl decorations, the rose corsages presented to all the gals, the programs, and the period soft drink bar pleasantly extraordinary but the program too offered something new.

Paced by "Corky" Moskin uncorking a deluge of typical master of ceremony jokes, Joe Bondi gave out with one of his sentimental ballads, Bill Bowering, Dave Dutcher, Estelle Rouch, and Joe again in typical gay nineties style cavorted through "My Coney Island Baby," Freddie Poisson pantomimed a "A Coed at Daybreak," and J. C. Dillard with the customary hanging fag and tin-pan-alley piano self-accompaniment sang an original song aimed at house leader McMasters, and lampooning gold braid in general. Perhaps the only thing missing all evening was the blustering of Bob Riley, who has married "Chick" Kramer and now awaits ship at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Word From Philly

Lt. Roy Jones returned to active duty Tuesday after spending more than two weeks in the Philly Naval Hospital and resumed his position as executive officer of the unit. He tells us that among the bedridden trainees down there George Meeker and "Radar" Parker have been recommended by the Survey Board for medical discharges. Athletic specialist Frederick, formerly a petty officer at Penn State, is up for an M. D., too. While nothing has been decided concerning Lee Woehling and Jack Repas, we do know that Jay Becker has been operated on and will soon return to active duty.

Where They Go From Here.

The three returning ensigns last weekend were Frank Thompson, Joe Biggard, and Walt Schrader, all to receive further training at the Advanced Line Officers' School in Miami. Bill Hershey, recently commissioned at Notre Dame, will study there too. . . . Among the other former trainees at Penn State: Ronnie Saxe is a second class seaman on the battleship Washington out in the Pacific, Ed Fischer is in Fire Control School at the Lakes, Freddy Daggett is in Aerographer's school in Lakehurst, New Jersey.

G. E. Barre is a third class yeoman attached to a landing party unit somewhere in the South Pacific, Dick Kucel is a seaman first at the Great Lakes RT school, Coyte Hunter and his pet squirrels are in the Philippines where Coyte serves as an athletic specialist, and "Pinhead" Walter of all people is at the San Diego Hospital Apprentice School.

Thespian Sailors

Not only did Jack Reid have the male lead in "Guest in the House" Friday and Saturday but he slipped an engagement ring on the finger of his Philadelphia gal Saturday afternoon. Take it easy, Jackson! Meanwhile Bob Stabley using only four words and a whistle, pantomimed his way into the inner circle of good acting.

Spotlight Buddies

This week rather than telling you of some Pacific veteran, our spotlight is turned on Bill MacHale and George Martin, two swabbies with a coincident past. Though they enlisted hundreds of miles apart in December, 1942, they met at Great Lakes and became fast friends. They were in the same outgoing unit, rode to Memphis together and remained buddies at the aviation radio school there. They were shifted to Jacksonville's operational training school together, slept in adjoining bunks, and were the only two retained from their company as instructors.

When they joined V-12, they were sent to the University of North Carolina where they had all their classes together for eight months. Now well into their third semester at Penn State they room together and, with thirty-two months in the Navy together, now serve as battery mates for the champion Bks. 37 softball team.

Semester Plan-

New Summer Session Plan

In planning a two-semester program the committee recommended that the arrangement provide for summer sessions which would be advantageous to students wishing to expedite their graduation. It suggested that the summer sessions be arranged in either two-week periods of six weeks each or the present arrangement of three weeks intersession, six weeks main session, and three weeks post-session.

Educational advantages of the two-semester non-continuous program, as found by the committee, are as follows: a great amount of personal testimony, although little factual evidence, has pointed to the fact that educational effectiveness has decreased both here and elsewhere during continuous operation; summer employment for students, whereby they can secure valuable experience, is impossible on the three-semester plan; and faculty summer employment, advisable in order that they may keep up with current developments, is likewise impossible on the present plan. Financial advantages, and those relating to plant utilization, were believed to depend on attendance during whatever summer program is in operation.

Recommend 12-Month Pay

The third recommendation was for the payment of faculty salaries in 12 monthly installments, maintenance of present faculty salaries, a suitable differential for faculty members serving 12 months a year as compared with those serving for only two semesters, and a statement in their contracts of the duration of service required of faculty members serving only two semesters. Systematic provision for faculty vacations, and a restriction of admission periods to once yearly were also recommended.
