division of metallurgy in the department of mineral technology November 1, and E. Willard Miller, who will report October 16 as associate professor and chief of the division of geography in the department of earth sciences.

Professor Low earned his bachelor's degree at Purdue University and his doctorate at Carnegie Institute of Technology. He was employed by several industrial plants before joining the College staff in 1942, leaving in 1944 to join the research and development department of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation at Pittsburgh.

Professor Miller taught at the University of Nebraska, Ohio State University, and Western Reserve before joining the Office of Strategic Services in 1944, as head of the Far Eastern desk. His principal job was the preparation of map intelligence reports on the Far Eastern countries. A graduate of Clarion State Teachers College, he earned his master's degree at Nebraska, and his doctorate at Ohio State.

Other new appointees follow: Alfred V. Overon, visiting professor of educational administration, for the period from October 20 to June 30, 1946. Professor Overon is associated with the University of North Dakota at the present time.

Merlin T. Henderson, associate professor of agronomy. Formerly an agent for the U. S. Department of Agriculture, more recently he had served as assistant professor of agronomy at the University of reaction Hall on October 30. At 8 p. m. that night, representatives from the various campus activities will address new students at a joint mass meeting in Schwab Auditorium. The purpose of the different groups will be explained and freshmen will receive directions on how they may qualify for membership.

As a finale to the closing of registration and Freshman Week, October 31, the Penn State Players are sponsoring a party for all newcomers interested in the various phases in the production of a play. This party will be held in Schwab Auditorium at 8 p. m.

Geographers Needed

Global war, plus the increased emphasis on air travel, has created an urgent need for qualified geographers, according to Dr. R. E. Murphy, chief of the geography division at the College.

Minnesota. Joe Samuel Taylor, associate professor of dairy husbandry extension, effective November 1. He formerly was associated with the American Jersey Cattle Club and comes to Penn State from Cornell, where he also was engaged in extension teaching.

Louis F. Peck, associate professor of English Composition, effective November 1. A graduate of Brown University, with his master's degree and doctorate from Harvard, he last taught at the University of Tennessee.

Hall during registration and at the office of Robert E. Galbraith, faculty advisor for veterans.

All men who were honorably discharged from the Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, or Merchant Marine, are eligible for membership in X-G-I Club:

"Don't forget to come to our smoker," said Commander Turek. "We want to meet you new X-G-I's, and we want to help you get straightened out if we can. Drop around; it ought to be a good time."

PanHel Governs Sororities

Panhellenic Council governs women's fraternities. It works under the National Panhellenic Council and is composed of two representatives from each sorority.

Its purpose is to assist sororities to run smoothly, to solve common problems, to provide a foundation for cooperation among sororities, and to foster good will.

The presidency rotates among the chapters in order of their dates of founding at the College.

Seventeen sororities have chapters at the College. Fourteen are national and three are local sororities. At a time set by Panhellenic Council, formal rushing is conducted by all sororities. Rushing is conducted according to the rules and regulations set up by Panhellenic. A book is issued to all freshmen prior to rushing which explains the procedure.

Ex-GI's Set Pace

Ex-servicemen already know their way around at the College. Six of their number have been named class presidents. There are only eight such offices.
