

"Task Force" On Campus

Ex-GI Leads Triple Life

War Veteran Scott Stetler may go to the classroom alone, but at home he has a wife, two children—and an animal kingdom—waiting for him.

Home is a small cottage—Mrs. Stetler calls it "a sort of dream house"—about a mile beyond the town limits. Sharing its warmth with the Stetlers are a dog and cat, both family pets.

Stetler, who's attending the College after six and one-half years in the Navy, virtually leads a triple life. He looks upon his college career, not as a one-man job, but as a family enterprise.

He's a conscientious student, and studies every night—"in the bedroom, with the door closed," his wife explains, adding that this arrangement permits her to "play the radio without annoying him."

By day he does part-time electrical repair work to supplement his GI income, and all the rest of the time he's "Daddy"—the world's best guy—to his sons, Jimmy, 3 years, and David, 11 months.

Stetler a native of Williamsport, lost the sight of one eye when he was injured in a submarine repair shop at New London, Conn. He's studying electrical engineering at the College.

Got A $64 Question? Reference Librarians Know The Answers

Do you know why General Wainwright was accorded a 17-gun salute when he returned to New York following his imprisonment? Is a ham canape eaten with a fork or with your hands?

No, the Collegian is not emulating "Information Please," but merely referring your latest $64 questions to the library reference desk.

As school librarians discovered last year, many students are confronted with simple but perplexing questions either in their social life or in the classroom. Their vagueness and apparent insignificance stumps even the three pointers.

How is Chinese Kowtow performed? Whose poem begins "I can't take that nickel?" What is the longitude and latitude of State College?

These and many other brain teasers are solved readily by books available at the reference department.

Besides the usual indexes, biographies, and atlases, weekend adventurers can find invaluable information on bus schedules, and hotels, and restaurants in all parts of the country.

Various reports for numerous governmental agencies too are at the students' disposal listed under "U. S." in the card catalogue or kept at the periodical desk.

The library staff urges everyone to take full advantage of the building's facilities.

Adams in 'Who's Who'

Dr. Clifford R. Adams, associate professor of education and psychology, was listed in the monthly supplement of "Who's Who." The supplement contains biographies which will appear in the biennial volume. His name will also be seen in the next volume of "The Book of Authorities" which is an index arranged according to the specialisms involved. He will be listed under "Family Relations."

Purple Quill To Broadcast

Station WMAJ, State College, will introduce in the near future "Purple Quill Presents," a radio program given by the College literary club. Charles E. Barr will be master of ceremonies on these programs which will present original works and feature interviews with guest speakers.

Purple Quill, the literary club composed of undergraduates and their faculty associates, was reorganized in the summer semester of 1945 by an essay writing class at the College. Officers elected at the initial meeting of the club are: Charles M. Barr, guildmaster; Miss Julie Cregg Brill, scribe; and Margaret Wasson, custodian.

Founded in 1928 by Fred Lewis Pattee, Purple Quill has had as its purpose the stimulation of an aesthetic interest in art and its composition. Mr. Pattee was the initial member of the club and is best remembered on the campus as the author of the Penn State Alma Mater. The club flourished until 1935 when it dissolved.

The essay class which reorganized the club was under the instruction of Miss Julie Cregg Brill, professor of English Composition. Other members are: Charles E. Barr, Eleanor Bennett, Stanley Huppert, Kathryn Lawrence, Lynn Rummel, and Margaret Wasson.
