

Veteran Couple Become Rookies Again, As Frosh

S/Sgt. Howard Nurnberger and his wife, First Lt. Gladys Nurnberger, have just signed up for another four-year hitch.

Once again, they're "rookies"—newly-enrolled freshmen at the College.

Howard, who put in 31 months with the signal corps in North Africa and Italy, is enrolled in electrical engineering. Gladys, formerly a WAC recruiting officer with the Sixth Service Command, plans to study home economics.

Both are native Pittsburghers. They were married in March 1942, after Howard had been in service six months. He shipped out, and she skipped to the nearest recruiting station.

"I figured," she recalls, "that the WAC was the place to be when my husband was overseas. And now that he's in college, I figure it's the place for me, too." Gladys Fights Too

While Howard was fighting his way through North Africa, Gladys—who has brown hair, brown eyes, a pug nose, and a ready laugh—was fighting her way through the WAC Officers Training School at Des Moines, Iowa.

"Those seven weeks of OCS," she says, "were the toughest I've ever lived through. When I finally got those gold bars, I felt like Einstein."

Their wartime differences in rank seem to bother everybody but the Nurnbergers.

"People are always asking about it," Gladys explains, "but we just think it's funny. And we certainly didn't bother with any military customs when Howard came home.

The blond blue-eyed former non-com added that he "honestly didn't think it was necessary to salute my own wife, when I hadn't seen her for so long."

Their First Home
Temporarily residing in a furnished room, the Nurnbergers are anxiously awaiting the go-ahead signal to move into the trailer community which the College is setting up for married veterans and their families.

It will be their first home. Both seem to think it will be more fun than trouble living in "trailer town" because, as they explain it, "everybody will be a veteran and interested in the same things."

"Anyway," Gladys adds, "if we could get through everything in the army, we certainly ought to be able to stand a few inconveniences."

Gladys and Howard both have two brothers who also were in service. Though she outranked all five men in her family, the former lieutenant seems more happy with her present titles of Mrs. Nurnberger and coed Gladys Nurnberger.

Union of South Africa Orders Psychology Films

Thirty-three films in fields of psychology and psychiatry have been ordered from the College's Psychological Cinema Register by the Union of South Africa.

According to Irving C. Boerlin, supervisor of Audio-Visual Aids in Central Extension and business manager of the Register, this is the second time films have been exported to a foreign country by this service. A number of films were sent to New Zealand last year. The South Africa order was for $1050.

The Psychological Cinema Register is operated by the Audio-Visual Aids Library and sells or rents films on psychology and related subjects to educational and medical institutions and qualified professional individuals. Edward E. VanOrmer, associate professor of psychology, is editor of the register.

Campus Clique Re-enters College Political Scene

Jammed to overflowing, 105 Main Engineering was the scene Friday night of a mass meeting inaugurating Campus Clique's re-entrance into college politics, after an absence of over two years.

The meeting, called by several members of the old Clique, was attended by a cross-sectional representation of the student body, consisting of sororities, fraternities and independent men and women, all seemingly interested in the bringing back of the old party.

The purpose of the meeting, according to James McKecknie, spokesman of the Campus Clique, was to find out the feeling of those present as to what the political success of the party would be. After an open discussion, it was established that all were in favor of the reformation. A publicity committee was selected, and plans were laid for further meetings in the near future.

Meet Mrs. Bettye Underhill—Coed, Housewife, Mother

A new kind of merry-go-around . . . a human one . . . has been discovered at the College.

Mrs. Bettye Underhill, a brown-eyed girl with a blue-eyed baby, is a combination World War II veteran, coed, faculty wife, housekeeper, and mother.

Bettye, the mother of three-month-old "Robbie" and the wife of Bradford, a research engineer at the Naval Ordnance Research Laboratory, was honorably discharged from the Spars last December and now her big aim is a degree in electrical engineering . . . "so I'll be able to understand what Brad and his friends are talking about," she explains.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Power of Upper Montclair, N. J., Bettye met her husband at the Montclair High School.

"It was one of those famous platonic friendships," she says, "and look how it ended."

After high school, she became one of the first enlisted Waves to go in training and transferred to the newly established Spars in January 1943, at which time she was sent to Boston where she served as master of arms for the district Coast Guard office of the First Naval District. At the time of her discharge, Mrs. Underhill had worked up to second class quartermaster . . . one of only three women in the nation to achieve this rating.

Brad, in the meantime, had finished his college work and obtained a position with the Naval Laboratory at Harvard. They were married and set up housekeeping in Cambridge . . . "a wonderful time," she recalls, "except I always had to parade on Sunday, our only day off."

Last spring, after her discharge, Bettye came to State College, set up housekeeping, and completed one semester of college, before her baby, Robert Reid Underhill, was born in July.

Mrs. Underhill's status may be confusing, but it has its advantages. For example, she belongs both to the X-G-I Club and to the X-G-I Wives. As a coed, she is eligible for all student activities and as the wife of a faculty member, she's always welcome at their affairs.

Occasionally, Bettye confesses, she has a few doubts about her ability to keep house, care for the baby, and go to classes, all at the same time.

"But Brad insists I can do it," she smiles, "so I'm willing to try."
