Tickets-

College and have the ticket numbers and seat numbers telegraphed to the Main office at the Stadium. In this way, there was a chance that they could get two tickets. Calling from Amity Hall, two miles from Harrisburg, Bob made connection with his roommate.

The tickets were located and from here the scene changes to State College where numerous persons were involved in carrying out the plan and to eventually get tickets at the stadium.

Bob's roommate took the tickets to Western Union, but they required that someone vouch for the validity of the tickets. At this point, John Dotey, a Notary Public was summoned and finally with the help of J. O. Keller, Bob's uncle and vice-president of the College, the telegram was sent.

When the Kellers arrived at the Stadium they found the long line of people trying to get tickets that had been turned in. This was the kind that they had hoped to get themselves!

Reaching the ticket window, Colonel Keller found that the telegram had been received and luckily the office had two tickets to give them. Bob received his own ticket and, ironically enough, the two duplicate tickets turned out to be better seats than the originals.

As for the ending of this adventure . . . Army won and the Kellers saw the game from the inside and not at a Newsreel theater.
