WSGA President

FLORENCE PORTER

"Penn State's oldest student organization is certainly worthy of the continued financial and moral support of the student body. Through the war, it has carried on a strong program in spite of curtailments and restrictions. Now more than ever, we need this organization which points the way to the finest and highest ideals of which Penn State is capable. I hope that all women students will support the PSCA in their present financial drive."

Miss Charlotte E. Ray, dean of women:

"The work of the Penn State Christian Association cannot be measured by statistics nor appreciated by mere words. The development of human personality does not adapt itself readily to analysis or display.

"Perhaps the great contribution of PSCA is in keeping always before us the vision of a better world and our obligation in making conditions that insure justice and peace."

Frank Schneider, president of IFC:
"In my opinion, PSCA has done very fine and worthwhile work on campus in past years, and I know they will continue this progressive action in the future. At the recent banquet I was impressed by a report of activities this organization has done within the past few years. All students should definitely stand behind this excellent group, and give more and continued support. I also think every student should contribute as much as he possibly can to this very deserving Association. As for IFC, I know we will give all we are able to in monetary as well as moral support."

They Say—

VICTOR BUEDE

"The PSCA finance campaign has come to be almost a campus tradition and is deserving of the support of all of us. I hope that the faculty will continue to give its generous support."

HENRY S. BRUNNER

Our student body this year and in the years immediately ahead will undoubtedly be the most restless and yet the most promising group to grace the campus in a long time. Some of the men and women returning from service will be in a desperate hurry. Some of the men and women returning from service will be in a desperate hurry. Some will want leisure and time in which to reorient themselves. Many will want everything changed. Just as many will want things as they were before the war—the same old college, the same old America. There will be revolters against religion and morals. Yet there will be also a large number of men and women with new seriousness and depth of purpose. Generally they will be a group seeking fellowship and wanting a tough, enduring faith for their lives ahead.

The Board of Directors of the Christian Association proceeds upon the philosophy that the environment provided on our campus should be such as to promote personal integrity, honesty, and Christian character among our students. The processes of education ought to be developing among students and faculty a broad and deep consciousness of social relationships and a sense of responsibility for the welfare of the community. Furthermore the horizon of sympathetic consideration for the rights and needs of others should be expanded until it embraces the whole world.

The Penn State Christian Association provides competent, well-trained leadership for a voluntary religious program including worship and personal counseling, and is pledged to further either directly or indirectly any efforts in harmony with the Christian purpose on behalf of the welfare of our students in body, mind, and spirit.

Everyone is invited and urged to contribute to and participate in the work of the Association.

President Rulph D. Hetzel

"The Christian Association has always offered a helpful and important program to Penn State students. The financial campaign which is just being launched offers the College community an opportunity to share in the program and I know it will have wholehearted support."

Commissions Plan Projects

As high as 85 per cent of the students at the College participate in PSCA activities, either by personal service or monetary contribution. This semester, there are approximately 600 students actively engaged in the Association's work and projects. General membership, including faculty contributors, totals approximately 2,500.

Outstanding achievements of this semester by Commission I are: providing Thanksgiving dinners in State College homes for foreign students; Penn State delegates sent to Intercollegiate Christian Conference at Williamsport in November; initiative for the World Student Service Fund drive on campus; and an American Christmas party for foreign-born students.

Commission II has counselled the freshman PSCA clubs, now merged in the men's and women's Freshman Council, and has held several parties for transfer students.

Under the direction of Commission III, weekly fireside meditation hours, organized Bible study group meetings, a Christmas morning watch service, and, in cooperation with the Student Inter-Faith Council, an all-college Thanksgiving service have taken place.

Recreation for underprivileged children at Millbrook has been the main undertaking of Commission IV, which planned and executed children's parties at Thanksgiving and Christmas times. Students interested in social work in the rural and urban communities find practical and satisfying work with this commission.

Formerly including wartime service as well as that to campus, Commission V has shifted its plans to Penn State in peace. The all-college Christmas Carol Sing was planned and presented by this commission of PSCA in conjunction with other College departments. Old Main Open House, ever popular with students and townspeople, is also a project of this commission.

Opportunities to hear about the success of Fairmount House East, and inter-racial dormitory which is operating now in its second semester, have been given by Commission VI at coffee hours, which were open to all who were interested.

All-College President

VAN LUNDY

"Sponsor of numerous year-round activities, the PSCA has always been a promoter and leader of events on campus. Also the guidance willingly offered by its directors serves the College in a second and important way.

"The current PSCA campaign to raise funds for its maintenance is certainly deserving of the wholehearted support of each student and organization interested in the welfare of the College."

Arthur R. Warnock, dean of men:

"Almost 75 years ago, when the Penn State student body was only a few years old, students formed a Christian Association as the first organized student activity on the campus. In all the years since, generations of Penn State students have kept the Christian Association active and progressive through both their financial support and participation in its activities and government. It now deserves this traditional support, increased and re-activated to serve post-war reconstruction of the best traditions of Penn State."

A. R. WARNOCK,
Dean of Men
