'Lady Engineers' Return To Campus Minus Slide Rules

When Curtiss Wright and Hamilton Standard Propellers, both major aircraft organizations, assigned several hundred young women to the College in 1943 to become "lady engineers," few of the girls looked upon it as their alma mater.

This was war and the young women were volunteers who had consented to give up their own college careers to prepare for emergency jobs. Their training was designed to prepare them for jobs in engineering offices, where they worked with structures, weights, designs, and aerodynamics.

But they liked their surroundings, surprised college officials by their grasp of technical subjects, and soon left the campus to do an urgent job in industry. Now, with the war won, the "lady engineers"—Penn State's feminine counterpart of the ex-GI—are returning to the campus to complete their training.

This semester, 11 of the Hamilton Standard Propeller and 8 of the Curtiss-Wright girls are enrolled at the College. But they no longer tote slide rules. Twelve are enrolled in the School of Liberal Arts, three in the School of Chemistry and Physics, two in the School of Education, and two in the School of Physical Education and Athletics.

They range from fourth to eighth semester students, and three of them hope to receive their degrees in February. Only one of the girls started her college career here. All of them have been accorded additional credits for their wartime training, and all of them are recognized now as full-fledged Penn Staters.

'Ex-GI Night'

are asked to bring their book slips to 318 Old Main so that book store bills may be paid. The slips may be had again if necessary.

Windcrest To Receive 14 Family-Size Trailers

Fourteen additional trailers, all expansibles, and a community hall are expected to arrive in State College before February 1, George W. Ebert, superintendent of grounds and buildings announced today.

The trailers will be brought from Baltimore, Md. and will be installed at the western end of Windcrest. Addition of the 14 expansibles will bring to 35 the number of large units used to house veterans with children.

The community hall will provide a site for the municipal government of the campus "borough," as well as certain recreational facilities for the residents of Windcrest.

Music Prof Explains

Classical Music To Cwens

It was decided at the business meeting preceding the lecture that Cwens would sponsor a movie and talk on the mural at the annual Old Main Open House. Plans were also made for a "girl-ask-boy" dance to be held April 27.
