

'Flaps,' Roving Canine Vet, Comes Home Via Constable

"Flaps" is home again. He's not a very good student, but he sure knows the ropes on sneaking out—those Ath coeds have nothing on him. But Friday night he snuggled cozily up in the town constable's arms and permitted himself to be taken home.

A little blond cocker spaniel, with large wistful brown eyes, Flaps is the mascot of the Oxford House. He is ten months old and weighs about ten pounds. Any careful Collegian reader undoubtedly noticed the want-ad for Flaps in last week's issue. Returned at last after a wild Penn State escapade Flaps is settled down to his honored place at the Oxford House.

Although he wasn't mentioned in the recent priority list for registration, Flaps is also an ex-GI. His master, Jack Devlin, a former member of the Army Air Corps bought Flaps in Pittsburgh. This was the beginning of life in the Dropping in a tree with his chute tangled in the branches, Walt was immediately captured by Hitler's Home Guard and simultaneously greeted by the neighboring Germans who had gathered to watch the spectacle. Almost immediately they started him off to Munster where he was kept in a cell for two days, and then sent to Frankfurt-on-Maine, a large interrogation center. The arrival of five American airmen—alive—was only aggravated by the boldness with which they sang "Right in Der Fuehrer's Face" in the train station. And, no need to say, the interrogation went unanswered.

After Frankfurt came a five day stay at Wetzler, a transient camp, where the gunner waited to be shipped to Stalagluft No. 4, a prison camp near Keifheide. Here two not-so-bad months were spent. But the worst was to come, and Walt tells the story himself from here on.

"I was one of the fortunate men who had a boxcar for a destination in the interior of Germany. The Russians were coming too close for Nazi comfort, and we had to move to Nuremberg. Most of the men at Luft No. 4 walked until the end of the war.

"After two months in Nuremberg, the prisoners of war had to be evacuated because of the approach of the American Seventh Army.

On April 29, 1945, liberating American forces began to appear, and after a short clash with the German SS, the American flag was raised over Mooseburg. Immediately the barbed wire fences came down and the POW's were just American GIs once again.

Air Corps for the pup. His first plane hop was on a B-24 from Pittsburgh to Ellington Field, Texas. And does Flaps like flying! When the motors begin to purr he jumps up, wags his tail, and barks like fury but as soon as he climbs into the plane he curls up beside Jack and goes to sleep.

Flaps is a real he-man when it comes to food. His favorite dish is "pork chops" but he'll settle for a steak once in awhile.

Coed Cashes In On Hobby

It will be Virginia Claus, editor and publisher of the "Cub Flyer," as of March 4. "Ginny" takes the feminine counterpart of a Horatio Alger hero when she assumes this position four days after she is graduated from the department of journalism at the College.

Working in public relations for the Piper Cub Company at Lock Haven Ginny will mostly be concerned with preparing material from distributors and dealers throughout the states for publication. This work will include the assembling of a 22 page monthly or bi-monthly magazine, "Cub Flyer."

This air-minded coed from Upper Darby earned her private flying license last April at the State College Air Depot at Boalsburg, and since then has hardly ever had time to attend classes.

"I'm only taking 12 hours of classes," says Ginny, "and those 12 hours are about the only time I spend on campus. The rest of the time I spend out at the air port."

Ginny believes that her license will come in handy in her new work, for she expects to fly to various air meets in conjunction with her magazine work. Also the Piper Company has an adjacent air port where it allows its employees to put in their flying time at cost.

"Few people are given a chance to combine their careers and hobbies quite so easily," says Ginny.

'Purple Quill' Defines Poet

"What Makes a Poet" will be the theme of Purple Quill's weekly broadcast over WMAJ, 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

Miss A. Pauline Locklin, associate professor of English literature, will discuss poetry and read several verses by Charles Heaps and Charles Adams. These student-poets will be interviewed by recently-elected Guildmaster Stanley Huppert. Program director will be Mary Lewis.

A meeting will be held at the home of Julia Gregg Brill, Purple Quill scribe, 8 Heatherbloom Apartments, 7 p.m. Thursday to discuss plans proposed by the new guildmaster.

Posters announcing coming broadcasts will be drawn by Kathleen Ryder.
