Back In Muffi—

"The public is thoroughly tired of having prison camps thrown at them," Gayle says. "They want to hear something fresh and new." That means skipping over the details of POW life—the scant food, the dysentery, the horribly cramped quarters. But they were there nevertheless and April 29, 1945, and liberation didn't come too soon.

"Nothing unusual about it," Gayle comments. "We're good friends just like we were before." He has been home in State College since October, 1945, and has enrolled as a third semester physics major.

Ancestors Arrived In 1639, Boasts Betsy Dean, Coed

Betsy Dean, third semester commercial art student, boasts of ancestors who first saw the shores of America in 1639.

"I believe William Henry Dean was the first to step ashore," she explained. "He landed on Fox Creek, Eastern Shore, Maryland, having arrived from England in 'The Betty' a ship he had built himself."

ESTABLISH TRADING POST
Together with the four sons who had immigrated with him, Dean established a trading post in Maryland for the Naticote Indians.

"The boys settled there and from then on the Deans spread over most of the country," Betsy proudly stated. "As far as we know, today there are just two families of Deans in America—the New England group and our Maryland stock."

FAMILY ORGANIZATION
In 1937 the Dean Family Organization was founded. Consisting of 1800 members now, all of whom are surnamed Dean or are children of Dean women, it meets yearly and publishes a semi-annual paper recording marriages, births, and deaths of the Maryland Deans.

"Its primary object is to perpetuate the family history and records, many of which may be seen in archives of the Pennsylvania Historical Society and the American Genealogical Society," said Betsy.
