Open Letter

One whole century ago, a few brave women were spending their lives trying to persuade an unreasoning public that women could profit by higher education and could intelligently exercise the rights of citizenship. Without a thought we have accepted these two great tokens of democracy, but sometimes we neglect one simple requirement of Penn State citizenship. In other words, "Keep off the grass!"

There have been beauty contests, queen contests, prize pig contests, but something new along this line is the yoyo contest for Watts Hall "yoyotes" scheduled for 1 o'clock Sunday morning. Helen Young, who has recently been bitten by the yoyo insect, is chief organizer of the contest, and she wishes to announce that entrance fee is 25 cents. However, spectators will be admitted to 320 Watts for only a dime. At last asking Helen refused to tell what the prize would be, but she promises it will be a surprise.

Dull Week

Maybe it's because of the big weekend coming up, but ye sororities and fraternities seem to have put in a rather dull week with very few things to report. The AChOs had a scavenger hunt and dessert party for the Chi Phis Tuesday, and the Theta Phi Alphas entertained for the Phi Kappas Sunday. Also on Sunday was the Theta party for the Phi Deltas. That's about all that happened.

No Dating

If your present dreamboat is a Chi Phi and he didn't ask you to go out last weekend until Saturday afternoon, don't feel you're slipping. It was just that it was alum weekend and the actives made a ruling of no-dates for the weekend. It was agreeable to the actives, but the alums had other ideas, and the ruling was rescinded Saturday afternoon. Which all goes to prove something about age and stuff, but we're not sure just what.

Orchids to You

"An orchid for remembrance" was Carol Wilbur's theme song last weekend. Her fiance, George Policastro, a Teke pledge, couldn't quite make it for the orchid dance 'cause he was with the track team at Ohio State, but Saturday afternoon Carol's orchid arrived to keep her company. (Ed. note: all this sacrifice and we lost the track meet anyway.)

On the slate for tomorrow night is the Triangle Pajama Party, originally planned for last month, and the Pi Kappa Phi Rose Ball. Surely there must be other organizations with plans for this weekend, but they failed to let us in on the secret.

Miss App's appointment will go into effect next week and will continue with the fall term.

It was announced at the Senate meeting Tuesday that a mistake in the records makes it necessary to retract the scholarship award given several weeks ago. The WSGA scholarship award is given each year to the third semester coed who had the highest all-college average at the end of her second semester. Because there was a tie for first place this year, with two coeds maintaining a 2.94 average, two $50 scholarships will be awarded. They will go to Catherine Craig Raup and Sara Estelle Stevens.

Modern Dance Gives Concert

The largest modern dance group ever organized at the College presented a recital at White Hall. Forty-five coeds under the direction of Miss Dorothy Briant danced to routines written by members of the group in costumes designed and made by the girls themselves.

Having no definite theme, the coeds glided through expressive dances ranging from the graceful to the comic. Highlight of the program was an interpretation of Carl Sandburg's "Good Morning, America" performed by the concert group of the club. The music for the routine was composed and written by Mrs. Jane Francis, accompanist for the program. Richard Frontman was narrator.

Miss Briant danced a solo interpretation of Debussy's "Claire De Lune." Gladly Lou Miller, who performed the dance solo at the May Day ceremonies, and Lovetta Mae Dinius also had solo roles in the recital.

A number entitled "Newspaper Highlights" interpreted gossip, with dancers wearing flowered hats; the comics; sports, with the coeds in baseball caps, and an obituary. Routines were also danced to Bach's Fugue 11, and an Appalachian folk dance.
