Braun Discusses 'Voice of Day'

"The Voice of the Day" will be the topic of Dr. David Braun of the Swarthmore Presbyterian Church when he speaks at Chapel services in Schwab Auditorium, 11 a.m. Sunday.

Dr. Braun is a graduate of York College in Nebraska, and Yale University. He has served one year as Director of Religious Activities at Lehigh University, and six years as University Pastor and Director of Religious Education at the University of Syracuse.

During the past nine years, Dr. Braun has served as Trustee of the Elwyn Training School and Director of the Westminster Foundation of the University of Pennsylvania. During the war he served on the Presbyterian War Time Service Commission at Newport News and in connection with the Naval Unit at Hampton, Va.

Mr. Braun was a Commissioner to the General Assembly from Pennsylvania in May 1942.

ist, Mel Powell, one of the country's most outstanding young pianists, Loui McGarity, trombone, and a surprise female vocalist to be announced shortly.

Two faces new to followers of BG will be seen when the band makes its State College appearance. Louis Bellson, with the band for a spell before entering the army, is the new drummer, and Addison Collins, formerly with the Glenn Miller Army Air Forces Band, will play the French horn. Both men joined the band early in May.

This use of a French horn, replacing one of the trombones, is an innovation for Goodman. Very few musical organizations make use of the instrument.

Tickets for the IFC dance, to be held from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., are priced at $4.

Anthem is played. In case of rain, the flag ceremony will be held by the color guard and bugler, and the public ceremony will be held in Schwab Auditorium with the military units occupying the side sections of the main floor, and the public the central section and the balcony. In this case, the program will consist of organ music, invocation, talk, and the singing of the National Anthem.

appreciation of more of your readers with similar serious articles.

I would also like to mention that the close juxtaposition to my last letter of the letters of commendation was unfortunate insofar as you failed to make it clear that my letter was written more than a week before it was published, and was in your office before your Tuesday 14th edition was printed.

Collegian's policy, "For a better Penn State," is unassailably perfect; the point at issue, which deserves your careful consideration, is "What constitutes a better Penn State?"

Yours, Rustum Roy.

Purple Quill To Present Poe's 'Tell-Tale Heart'

"The Tell-tale Heart" by Edgar Allan Poe will be presented by Purple Quill, campus literary organization, over WMAJ at 7:15 p. m. Saturday. Narrator for the presentation will be Joseph Bird.

Officers elected at a recent meeting are David Wagner, guildmaster; Nancy Sherriff, treasurer, and Miss Julia Brill, scribe. Miss Brill is faculty adviser for the group.

Champlin Studies Effects Of War upon Education

"The English and French children were better fed during the war than they are now," said Carrol D. Champlin, professor of education, who has just returned from a trip to Europe.

Authorized by the College to study the effect of the war upon education, Dr. Champlin now reports that the school children of England, Wales, and France by virtue of American lend-lease and Red Cross were able to obtain from 300 to 800 calories more than the official amount allocated to each person. Whereas the amount allocated per day was somewhere between 1200 and 1500 calories, school children were able to eat as much as 2300 calories.

Tuberculosis is present among 20 to 30 per cent of the children in Europe, Dr. Champlin continued. These figures would have been much higher had it not been for supplementary rations from the United States.

Brings Home Valuable Material

Dr. Champlin brought back to the United States 55 pounds—the maximum weight allowed without penalty—of books, bulletins, pamphlets, reports, and photographs.

"This material is of the greatest value because I had audience with some of the men who were the administrative directors of the evacuation program at the beginning of the 'blitz' in Europe," said Dr. Champlin. "I am compiling a report to present to the Office of Research Council at the College."

Approximately 1,300,000 women and children in England were evacuated to five major residential areas, Dr. Champlin pointed out. Great Britain claims this evacuation to be the largest human migration in the shortest time in the history of the world.

Plans for the exodus began from London just a few days after the Munich conference, before the bombing of Warsaw and Rotterdam, the professor said. All evacuees were given priorities. Mothers with babies up to two years received number one priority. Subsequent groups were made for expectant mothers, children two to five years old, the crippled, deaf, blind and aged, and finally the remainder of the school children.

Only one casualty occurred throughout the evacuation when a little girl broke her arm. Casualties of the blitz in London, however, were 70,000, and had it not been for the evacuation it would have been a much larger figure.

DR. CARROLL D. CHAMPLIN

During his trip, Dr. Champlin flew 7,390 miles to interview 30 prominent educational leaders and 50 others associated with the schools of Europe. He visited primary schools, secondary schools, universities, polytechnical schools, military training academies, parochial schools, and special schools for the various crafts.

Interviews Educators

In London he had a close view of the King and Queen and the two princesses in front of the Haymarket Theatre. A bystander later told him that such a view of the four members of the Royal family at one time is a "once-in-a-life-time sight."

He attended the three-day conference of the National Union of Teachers while in London, and heard members of the cabinet speak of the British educational system and its current needs.

"I talked to a number of teachers of English children," Dr. Champlin said, "and they pointed out that although there was some loss in formal subject matter, teaching the London children in evacuated areas had improved their health. They were benefited by the sunshine, by working in the gardens, exercising, and learning to do field work which they never would have learned otherwise."

R. W. Henninger Dies Suddenly

Roswell W. Henninger, professor of industrial engineering extension at the College, died at 1 o'clock Monday morning in Allentown of coronary occlusion. He was 53.

Henninger joined the staff of the College in 1937 as associate professor in industrial management.

Prior to coming to Penn State, he was head of the department of industrial management at North Carolina State College for 11 years. From 1918 to 1926 he served as assistant production manager and later personnel manager for the Miller Locke Co., now Yale and Towne, Philadelphia. He also held various positions with federal bureaus under NRA and with the Social Security Board, Washington, D. C.

Henninger was graduated from Williamsport high school in 1912 and in 1916 received a bachelor of science degree from Massachusetts State College. He received his master of science degree in 1928 from North Carolina State College. He also took graduate work at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and at Columbia University.

Surviving are his wife, Helen, and daughters, Mrs. Janet Hazeltine, Altoona; and Joyce, at home; also one son, Richard, at home.

Funeral services will be held at the Koch Funeral Home, at 10 a.m. Thursday. Interment will be made in Wildwood Cemetery, Williamsport.

Thespians Speed Up 'No Time for Trouble' For IFC Weekend

"OK kids, with life now—singggg." "Hey, anybody see my copy of Fuddy Duddy?" "Where can I get a pair of grey flannel trousers?"

IFC weekend is only two weeks away and Thespians are peering up their new show "No Time For Trouble." Rehearsals have spread out to Little Theatre, Carnegie Hall, the front hall of Schwab Auditorium and the main stage.

Bud Mellot is priming the dance chorus and working out the finale; John Holmes is training the quartette; and Mike Kerns is ready to get together with "Sock" Kennedy and start pulling the show together and putting the acts and scenes together in proper sequence.

Additional lyrics are being written for "Fuddy Duddy" and Ray Fortunato's "Alone in a Trailer," and construction crews are busy building a trailer. Midst all this hubbub of activity, Jim Mitchell and Chuck Pfeleor of the three stooges can be found on the floor playing bridge with Carol Deickmann and Bob Weiss with a deck of cards that measure three by six inches.

Mike Kerns, production manager of the show, summed up the cast enthusiasm by stating, "If this cooperation continues, there is no reason why, before long, Thespians can't receive the nation wide acclaim given Mask and Wig at Penn, and Hasty Puddin' at Harvard. At least that's our aim."

The Engineering Experiment Station has been awarded the Navy's Certificate of Achievement, President Ralph Dorn Hatzel announced today.
