National Park.
Guided tours will leave 121 Sparks at 1:30 p.m. Saturday to nearby points to show conservation at work. The tours will cover the Pleasant Gap Fish Hatchery at Fisherman's Paradise, the Alan Seeger State Monument (a virgin forest), and State Game Lands. George J. Free is in charge of arrangements.
Importance of the conservation education work being done at the College may be seen in the fact that 70 teachers are attending the Pennsylvania Conservation Education Laboratory during the Summer Session. They have been sent here on scholarships to study methods of attacking waste of our natural resources. This summer marks the first of these laboratories.

Eleven Faculty Members Initiated into Sigma Xi

Eleven faculty members at the College have been initiated into the Society of the Sigma Xi, scientific honor society.
They are: Luther T. Bissey, Robert J. Day, Homer H. Haggard, Francis T. Hall Jr., Paul M. Kendig, Clarence I. Noll, Theodore S. Polansky, Thomas A. Prater, Anton W. Rytina, Harold I. Tarpley, and Robert B. Taylor. James W. Eckerd was initiated as an associate member.
At the same time, A. Witt Hutchison was elected president, Philip X. Rice, vice-president, and Milton T. Lewis, treasurer, of the local chapter. L. S. Rhodes will continue to serve as secretary.
conserve one or more of our resources will be represented at the two-day conference. Registration will be held in 121 Sparks at 10 a.m. Friday.

Lack of Frosh To Hit Sports

Penn State freshmen will not appear in College sports during the forthcoming school year.
This change came when College officials ruled that only pre-war students with upperclass rating would be admitted to the campus in the Fall.
While the first-year students will be admitted to Penn State, they will be assigned to other institutions as freshmen-in-waiting. They will not be eligible for College sports until their sophomore year.
Football Coach Bob Higgins and other Lion mentors dislike the change because it takes away one of their most valuable sources of material and also deprives freshmen of a year's prepping under varsity coaches.
Since 1942, when freshman rules were relaxed for the duration, first year players have dominated the Penn State sports picture.
In football, freshmen were represented by Larry Joe, Joe Colone, Bobby Williams, Johnny Chuckran, Elwood Petchel, Sam Tamburo, Bronco Kosanovich, Chuck Drazenovich, Joe Tepsic and a variety of others.
The same was true of other sports, freshmen building the foundations of the College's athletic teams.
Without a new freshman class to participate in sports coaches feel that the teams will note their absence.

maintain a unified veteran's policy and to this end, a permanent steering committee was elected.
State Sen. Elmer J. Holland told the delegates that the only way they could impress politicians was by registering and voting.
Telegrams urging the rejection of the revived OPA bill and requesting extension of old price control regulations were sent to President Truman and all Pennsylvania Congressmen.
The conference voted to join in a state-wide buying strike and delegates were urged to lead the fight against inflation in their home communities.
