Between The Lions

WITH BEN FRENCH

Even the best formed plans always have a few hitches in them. So it is with the new farming out of freshmen policy of the College administration. This plan seems to be an ideal solution to the problem of what to do with the returning veterans but it's going to play havoc with Coach Bob Higgins' football plans.

The freshman class has provided the "Hig" with a wealth of material since the early years of the war. Remember Joe Cologne, Larry Joe and more recently, Joe Tepsic? They were freshmen and they were important cogs in the Nittany Lion machine. This year there will be no freshman and Higgins will be forced to look to veterans in the upper three classes.

But then some may argue what about before 1942 when freshmen were not eligible for varsity sports? Won't this year's situation be about the same as then? The answer is "No." In those days there were freshman teams where the fledglings learned much about football as it is played at Penn State. Also, the Lions were playing opponents who were not using first year men. This year it's different. Other colleges will be playing with freshmen while the Lions are not.

Here's the story of Bobby "General" Lee. The Negro triple-threat ace was named to the AP All-Pennsylvania team for three straight years when he romped all over the field for New Castle High School. He received all kinds of offers from the "big name" schools in the East and Midwest but he wanted to come to Penn State. Drafted soon after graduation, his first chance to go to college came this year and the door to Penn State was closed. Lee will be wearing the uniform of the Pitt Panthers this fall and we predict that you'll be hearing a lot more about him in the near future.

The story of Bobby Lee has been repeated many times this spring and summer. It's a heart-breaking job for Higgins to write those "Sorry but—" letters to promising players who want to play football for Penn State. The Lion coach is in a spot by himself and it's hard to take. Most colleges are taking freshmen this year, Penn State is one of the few that isn't.

Other college coaches have written to the "Hig" requesting the names of the players that he must send away. "Send them to us," they say, "We'll use them for a year and then send them back to you next year." Higgins is too wise to fall for these sly schemes. He knows that once a coach gets a good player, he won't wrap him up and send him to someone else at the end of a year. That's not even good business and football certainly is a business.

Campus Excursions Gaining Popularity

Penn State is apparently gaining a reputation as an excursion tour area, judging by the large numbers of state citizens who have recently made, and who plan to make tours of the campus.

Following upon closely the visits of 473 Clearfield county 4-H members, and 500 Franklin county farmers and their wives, is the announcement made today that two more large groups will tour the campus this month.

Several hundred members of the York County Senior Extension Association plan to make a visit to the College on August 20, while on August 23, approximately 300 farmers of Union county intend to tour the campus. These tours are exclusive of the many arranged conventions and study sessions made by organizations with the College.
