

Soph Hop Plans Completed, Say Prutzman and Sarge

Plans for the first big weekend highlight, Soph Hop, featuring Ray McKinley and his band, are in the final stage, according to co-chairmen Charles Prutzman and Richard Sarge.

Soph Hop will be held in Recreation Hall from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Friday, November 8, as the main event of Houseparty Weekend.

Other features of Houseparty Weekend include the Penn State-Temple football game at New Beaver Field Saturday afternoon and parties and dances at all the fraternity houses and by independent groups Saturday night.

Ray McKinley, the famous singing-drumming leader, features Chris Adams, female vocalist, and Teddy Norman with his new band. Ray, a native Texan, himself enjoys a fine reputation as a rhythm singer, being chosen by Bing Crosby one of his favorites before McKinley entered the service.

Campus ex-GI's remember Ray McKinley as the leader who took over Glenn Miller's band in England after Miller's disappearance in an aerial flight and who broadcast a series of musical programs, "The Swing Shift."

Robert Hirsh, committee member in charge of refreshments, stated that 100 gallons of party punch will be served during Soph Hop. The committee also announced that there will be no booths, but that sections of chairs will be marked off for the various campus groups.

Euwema

(Continued from page one) the division of languages and literature in the School of Science and Arts, and finally in his present position.

Married since 1928 Dr. Euwema has two children, Robert, 13, and Carol, 10. He holds memberships in The American Association of University Professors, The National Council of Teachers, of English, and Phi Kappa Phi among other organizations.

The new dean is author of two published works, "The Social and Ethical Theories of George Eliot" and "A Year's Work in Composition."

Entertainment at the tea will be provided by a musical ensemble under the direction of Prof. Hummel Fishburn of the music department. Members of the group are George Barber, violin; John Martin, violin; Robert Frederickson, viola; Ernest Rotili, cello, and Paul Teare, piano.

Faculty wives will assist at the tea table. The committee in charge of the reception is headed by Miss Julia Brill assisted by Mrs. Harriet Nesbitt and Miss Beatrice Hagen.

Deans of Women To Attend Convention

Pearl O. Weston, acting dean of women at the College, and M. Lucille Anderson, assistant, will attend the convention of the Pennsylvania Association of Deans of Women at the Penn Harris Hotel in Harrisburg today and tomorrow.

MI Conference Starts Today

The Tenth Annual Technical Meeting dealing with the secondary recovery of petroleum—how to take oil away from nature when she no longer gives it—will take place in the Mineral Industries Building today and tomorrow.

Sponsored by the Commonwealth in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association, representatives from Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, West Virginia and Oklahoma will discuss findings and report on studies made during the year in connection with methods of improving the recovery of crude oil.

The first technical session will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Mineral Industries Art Gallery, followed by the annual dinner at the State College Hotel at 6:15. The second session will convene at the same place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Roy E. Bailey and John DePetro will be co-chairman of the first session; John F. Buckwalter and E. M. Tignor are co-chairman of the second session. George J. Hanks, president of the South Penn Oil Co., will preside at the dinner.

Dr. Schissler Attends Institute in Chicago

Dr. Robert W. Schissler, assistant professor of chemistry will attend the annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute at the Hotel Stevens, Chicago, Illinois, November 11 to 15.

He will report on the six years work done at the College on the synthesis and properties of high molecular weight hydrocarbons. Study was made of 121 pure, heavy hydrocarbons to find which of the structures give physical properties that are desirable in lubricating oils.

This work was done by Research Project 42 of the Institute.

Military Department To Show War Films

The second of the monthly series of War Department films will be presented by the military department of the College in 119 New Physics at 7:30 p.m., November 7.

Films which will be shown are "Divide and Conquer," "Dairy of a Sergeant," "Battle of Midway," "San Pietro," and "Sea Power in the Pacific."

A Lean and Hungry Look

The editor of this paper has gone on record saying that if one of our staff wanted to try his hand at writing a column we would consider it.

We print it not because we think it particularly good, but because many students have asked for such a column.

It is being run today without the name of the author for several reasons: 1. If student opinion is against it, it will be dropped. 2. The column will not be run again unless future columns meet our standards.

If these requirements are met, then we will print the name of the author in future issues. Ed.

Dear Brutus: If you have missed receiving regular samples of my penmanship lately it's because I didn't have a pen or pencil either. However, my roommate carelessly left his desk drawer unbolted this morning, so I hope you can read the scrawlings of this cheap inferior solid gold pen I found there.

I always tell my roommate that typewriters are much handier and besides we need one for my book reports. My roommate always tells me to go where it's warm. For my health I suppose.

Not that it gets cold up here at State. We only burn the furniture for effect. An open fire in a room is so cozy. And that old stuff all over the ground is just excess precipitation from the chem lab. Those chem majors are always slaving over some formula though.

I heard one discussing a mixture of Alcohol and Aresnic for the house on weekends. No fraternity house is complete without a chem student to brighten (or blow) it up. But then no house is complete without one either, is it.

Brutus, old man, I have good news for you. Remember that old fad about buying textbooks for courses up here? Well, that's all over now. Bright and early Saturday after lunch I rushed downtown to buy a few books.

Leaving my wheelbarrow outside, I wandered into Keeler's to find the place seething with happy students, fingering their knives and guns as they looked pleasantly toward the back of the store at the clerks.

The clerks were their own busy selves, engrossed in drawing swastikas on the floor as usual.

Some intellectual-looking coeds were closely watching the antics of some little white cubes in one corner of the room. Physics problem, I gathered.

So I settled down patiently to wait for my turn at the clerks. Three hours later, some one tapped me lightly on the head. Wiping the blood out of my eyes, I turned to face a gentle-looking fellow of about seven feet, and weighing 50 pounds.

He politely asked me to keep my head off his shoulder or "next time he'd use the sharp edge of the axe." Warned by this friendly gesture, I turned by attention to some educational books on the shelf beside me. Did anyone ever hear of a philosopher named Max Schulman?

Tactfully clearing my throat, and gathering my courage, I croaked, "But the red ten on the black jack."

We will pass over the ensuing turmoil! To sum things, they were all out of books. "Come back in a year," were the clerk's last words.

So you see, Brutus, all shortages aren't so bad. Besides, after two bluebooks already, I find that you can flunk them just as well without the text books.

With reflection. Cassius.

P. S. Can you lend me five million for a Student Union Building?
