

NEW YORK—New York City is mourning one of its most colorful personalities—former Mayor James J. Walker. He died last night at 6:25 EST in Doctors' Hospital of cerebral thrombosis—a blood clot on the brain.

Walker had been New York's mayor from 1925 to 1932 during riotous days of the roaring twenties—the days of flappers, speakeasies and colossal parade under ticker tape showers. He was internationally known for his dapper dress and sparkling wit. Walker has resigned his mayor's post in 1932 while Tammany Hall was under investigation by the New York State Senate under the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, then governor.

WASHINGTON—There's no longer any doubt that it was President Truman himself who ordered that federal court no-strike injunction against John L. Lewis yesterday. Presidential Secretary Charles Ross says the injunction was obtained on specific instructions from the President now enjoying a Florida holiday at Key West. The restraining order warns Lewis not to give his miners the slightest sign that their government coal contract may be terminated.

Back in 1919, shortly after the first World War, President Wilson obtained an injunction against Lewis forbidding a similar coal strike. And that time, Lewis backed down, saying his miners could not fight the entire government.

WASHINGTON—Budget Director James Webb has ordered government payroll ceilings cut down more than 144-thousand federal employees. But he dismissals probably will not be as drastic as this personnel reduction might indicate because many agency payrolls are not up to their ceiling strength anyhow.

LONDON—That vigorous rebellion in Britain's House of Commons has come to nothing. After a three-hour debate led by 58 Laborite members demanding warmer relations with Russia and less collaboration with America, the House gave the government's foreign policy a 535-to-nothing vote of confidence. Prime Minister Ailee had emphatically denied charges that Britain had sought an exclusive Anglo-American alliance.

President Truman Sees Lions Sink Navy, 12-7

By ALLAN W. OSTAR
Penn State's inspired Nittany Lions sunk a stubborn Navy eleven 12 to 7 in a hard-fought gridiron battle at Annapolis Saturday before a capacity crowd of 22,000, including President Truman and his party.

The Lions completely dominated the first half with tailback Elwood Petchel scoring twice for Penn State in the second period.

Navy scored its lone tally in the third quarter as part of a determined effort to fulfill President Truman's prediction of a Middle victory.

Williams Sparks Drive
Sparked by Bobby Williams, the Lions began an 81-yard drive in the opening minutes of the game which was halted on the Navy one-yard line as the Middies stiffened their defenses in a goal line stand.

Early in the second period, with Navy in possession of the ball on its own 21-yard line, Reeves Baysinger threw a forward pass. Petchel intercepted it on the run and raced 25 yards unmolested for a touchdown.

Following Petchel's kick-off, Navy was held to two yards in three tries by the combined efforts of tackle John Finley and end Sam Tamburo.

65-Year March
Navy, unable to gain through the powerful Penn State line, punted to Petchel who returned the ball from the Lion 35 to the 47-yard line.

Petchel then whipped a 23-yard pass to Wallace Triplett who went to the Navy 29 before being brought down. After making a beautiful run of 14 yards, Petchel passed to end Fred Bell who made a leaping catch on the Navy 2-yard line. Again the Middle line stiffened, but on the third try Petchel dove through right guard to score.

Triplett Breaks Through

Later in the second period with Penn State in possession of the ball on its own 49-yard line, Triplett took a lateral pass from Petchel and weaved through the entire Navy team before he was caught by the Middle safety man on the 11-yard line.

Navy rose up in another goal line stand and the Lions were unable to gain. On fourth down Ed Czekaj went in to attempt a field goal, and on the fake, Petchel picked up the ball and sped to the Middle 3-yard marker before he was thrown out of bounds. Navy then kicked out of danger.

Cabinet Approves Trial Plan For All-College Suggestion Box

A method for students to inform All-College Cabinet of campus needs and to make suggestions was approved by the Cabinet at its last meeting and is now in effect.

Mary Lou Waygood, WSGA president, suggested that a box be placed at Student Union for this purpose. Each week a committee will go through the suggestions and refer them to the proper officer who would best understand the situation and be in position to do something about it.

The box will be given a two-week trial.

Robert Foote, All-College president, appointed a committee of students and faculty to act as a go-between for the two bodies and thrash out mutual problems. The Council will only have powers of recommendation. Members will be Pearl Weston, acting dean of women; Arthur Warnock, dean of men; and Samuel Wyand, representative of the president's office.

Students include Foote, Fritz Lloyd, IFC president; Frank Tidona, ISC president; Florence Ratchford, Pan-hellenic president; and Miss Waygood.

Mr. Truman Now Knows About State

The threatened coal mine strike isn't the only thing which reminds President Truman of Pennsylvania today.

Thanks to a hard-fighting Penn State football team and the 80-piece Blue Band which has apparently reached its pre-war peak of perfection, the chief executive should be Keystone State conscious today.

Coach Bob Higgins' Lion football team turned back Navy, 12-7, before Mr. Truman and 22,000 other fans Saturday while Hummel Fishburn's Blue Band serenaded the president in a between-halves performance termed by a Naval official the "finest ever seen at Annapolis."

The fast stepping Blue Band formed a grand piano and played "Missouri Waltz" especially for Mr. Truman and then honored the Naval Academy by forming a block "N" and singing the "Navy Blue and Gold" directed by Frank Gullo. Then followed a "USN" and playing of "Anchors Away" and a "PSC" and Penn State's "Alma Mater."

Before the game, Mr. Truman told the Navy grid team he was "counting on them to beat Penn State." The Nittany Lions, however, didn't hear the pep talk and used the Higgins version to upset another presidential decree.

Hetzel Receives Faculty, Staff

Ralph D. Hetzel, president of the College, and Mrs. Hetzel will entertain the faculty and staff at the annual reception in White Hall, from 8:30 to 11:30 p. m. Thursday.

Members of the Board of Trustees and their wives have been invited to join the Hetzels in receiving. Guests are asked to enter White Hall by the northeast door.

Campus Owls will provide music for dancing in the main gymnasium. Refreshments will be served in the Play Room at the east end of the building by the students in Institution and Hotel Administration under the direction of Professor Esther A. Atkinson.

Robert Foote, All-College president, and James Sheehan, senior president, will usher, in addition to 100 faculty men ushers.

White Hall will be the scene of the President's reception for the first time. Formerly, the President entertained in Old Main, but since the first floor lounge has been taken over by College administrative agencies, this was no longer possible.

'Get Jazz on Air,' Demands Hodes

"Jazz must be played on the radio as often as Guy Lombardo, before the masses will get to like it," Art Hodes, jazz pianist, stated last night.

"People like what they hear a lot of," he added. "If we could jam on the air as much as some of the other types of music, they would learn to enjoy it. If we keep going at this pace, we're going to grow beards before we accomplish anything of major importance."

Hodes, who presented a concert of jazz at Schwab Auditorium last night with his band and Sidney Bechet, is the editor of "Jazz Record," a magazine dealing with jazz record releases.

College Opposes Allegheny in Dual Debate

Greek Sea-Story Teller

By RALPH PEARSON

Any ex-sailor on campus who might be in the mood for swapping sea stories would be interested in meeting the occupant of room 26 in building 13 at Pollock Circle. Lieutenant Commander George Stamoulis, RHN, of that address, would hold his own with some to spare for his naval career is probably unmatched for variety and action by any other student at the College.

Has been around

A special student in the mechanical engineering graduate school, Stamoulis has had a series of adventures that include participation in the coronation ceremonies of the King of England in 1937, participation in the historic naval battle at Matapanan, having his ship sunk by German dive-bombers, having a second ship blown from under him by an Italian submarine, and being shelled by shore batteries off the Anzio beach-head.

Begins at 20

A native of Athens, Greece, he started his naval career at the age of 20 when he entered the Royal Hellenic Naval Academy in 1934. Upon completing a post-graduate course there in 1939 he was assigned to the destroyer Hydra. The Hydra was sunk by

AVC Housing Committee To Discuss Low Cost Housing Plans Tonight

The immediate erection of low cost housing for married veterans on campus will be considered at a housing meeting to be held in 110 Home Economics at 7:30 this evening, according to Royce Nix, chairman of the AVC housing committee.

The current effort to bring Quonset type dwellings to State College calls for each interested veteran to put up an investment of $1000. However, Nix added, if the veterans feel that this sum is beyond their reach, an attempt will be made to adjust downward the amount of money initially needed.

Announcing that Mr. Aikens, president of the First National Bank in State College, may speak at the gathering, Nix said that if there is not an adequate response tonight, the present plans will be dropped entirely.

German bombers in the Gulf of Athens in 1941.

It was in December of 1942 while working with the British Second Escort Flotilla that Stamoulis participated in the battle of Matapanan in the Mediterranean. It was here that units of the British fleet destroyed a major portion of the Italian Navy. In all official reports, Stamoulis says, the British Admiralty is careful to give credit to the Greek Navy for their help in the engagement.

In June of 1943 he was aboard the British troop transport Empress of Canada when it was torpedoed off the coast of West Africa by an Italian submarine.

Arrives in U. S.

He arrived in New York in May, 1943, where he was assigned to duty on the LST 35. The 35 made a trip to England, then to Anzio where it was forced to stay under heavy fire from German shore batteries.

His entry to the College was made possible through special arrangements between the Greek Admiralty and the United States Navy and was helped considerably by his having applied for admission to an uncrowded graduate school.

After earning his M.A. in engineering, Stamoulis plans to return to Greece for further duty with the Greek Navy.
