With Pitt weekend in the offing, and the Pittsburgh hotel strike still on, Nittany Lion fans are wondering just where they will be staying before and after the game.

All hotel reservations have been cancelled, and even the football squad had to find other quarters almost at the last minute. Neil Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, said yesterday that, since the team can not stay at the Hotel Schenley, accommodations were secured at a small hotel about an hour's drive from Pittsburgh. The team will make the trip to Pittsburgh Friday night, returning Sunday.

At last report Hum Fishburn was still in Pittsburgh looking for rooms for the Blue Band.

The general consensus seems to be that Pittsburgh friends and relatives of Penn State students and alumni will have a sudden influx of house guests this weekend.

Most of the fraternities and other groups on campus will be scattered throughout the Pittsburgh area, meeting at previously-arranged central points for parties, dances, and smokers.

Tau Kappa Epsilon reports that ten of the brothers who live in Pittsburgh have made arrangements to take care of the entire fraternity and their dates. They will gather at the Glass Bar located between Bridgeville and Cannonsburg about ten miles outside Pittsburgh.

Sigma Pi members also will stay with relatives and friends, meeting at Mercker's Music Bar and the Cork and Bottle, in

Russian-Born Dr. Janzen Transforms "Come on", "All Right" Into Doctorate

"Come On" and "All Right" were the only English words he spoke when he landed in Canada 23 years ago. Now he holds a doctorate and is a faculty member in the political science department of the College.

Dr. Henry Janzen was born in Russia of Dutch-Mennonite parentage and lived there for 20 years through a revolution, a civil war, a famine and pestilence.

Reticent About Past

He is very reticent about speaking of the past. "I have no pity for those immigrants from the old country who constantly live in the past. All that is passed is done with, and we must live in the present," Dr. Janzen said.

But some of his hardships in Russia did come to light. Since his family owned property and "exploited" labor for profit, they were on the receiving end during the Revolution. The Janzen family lived in an area where the

College Debates Allegheny Squad

Prof. Joseph F. O'Brien's men's debate squad will engage Allegheny College today in its second encounter of the current season. To be discussed is this question: "Resolved: that Labor should be given a direct share in the management of industry."

In 316 Sparks at 4:15 p. m., Richard K. Hill will preside as the College negative team will debate the Allegheny affirmative delegates. Martin Lenning and Charles Tanguy will represent the squad.

Samuel Neeley and Edward Joiner have been assigned to handle the affirmative side for the college in the evening debate, scheduled for 121 Sparks at 8 p. m. Allegheny will defend the status-quo, with Malcolm Goldstein chairman of the meeting.

These debates will be non-decision, with open forums to follow the conclusion of the meeting.

Coach O'Brien asserted that many of our debates this season will be non-decision affairs. Reason for this, according to O'Brien, is that speakers can concentrate more upon pleasing and interesting the audience, rather than concentrating too much upon points to be approved of by the judges.

Soph President Asks All Tunesmiths To Pen New Class of '49 Song

A call for tunesmiths and lyricists was made this morning by Dick Sarge, sophomore class president.

"The indefinite 'Class of Forty-blank' has been succeeded by the Class of '49 and a class song is needed," Sarge said.

Songs should be written in the parody style using a well-established tune with new lyrics and should be more than one verse in length with a chorus.

New tunes will be considered, however, should they be catchy. Songs may be submitted, marked "Soph Song," at the Student Union desk in Old Main before December 3. The new class song, best of those submitted, will be presented at the Soph Mixer December 4.

Syracuse Edit Blasts Miami

"No thanks, Miami" was the title of an editorial appearing on the sports page of the Syracuse Daily Orange, Syracuse University student paper. The article expressed student opinion about a reported invitation from Miami University to play Syracuse in football, replacing the cancelled Penn State-Miami game.

Miami's game with Penn State for Nov. 30 was called off because of two Negro players on the Penn State team. Although there was no official confirmation of the Miami offer, student opinion at Syracuse rejected such an invitation as "an insult to the university and its fine teams."

The editorial continued, "Unless Miami changes its athletic policy it would be better for all concerned if they were dropped from the realm of college athletics."

"In a spot that is already battered and rocked by tinges of dishonor, this latest indignity reaches a new high," the article concluded.

SU Committee To Continue Building Plans

Student Union Committee is planning to carry on their work as far as conditions will permit although it will be impossible to start construction for at least two years according to C. Samuel Wyand, assistant to the president.

"The administration is definitely in favor of a Student Union building," Mr. Wyand said at a meeting, "but shortages of labor, materials and money make it difficult to carry plans into effect immediately."

"There are three methods of obtaining money for new college building," he said. "We raise funds through state appropriation, by floating a bond on a self-liquidating building such as dormitories and dining commons, and by gifts and bequests from the alumni."

"The third method is the only practical way for the Student Union to obtain money," he continued. "It would be necessary to lay a blank check before the contractors to start building now and this is not possible by this method."

Representatives of 30 organizations attending the meeting decided on continuing work on the project as far as possible so that details will be taken care of when construction can begin.

Five architecture students were presented with one of Frank Lloyd Wright's books as awards for their work on the Student Union project recently on display at the Athletic Store. The winners were Donald Horton, Robert Christensen, George Tilghman, Arthur Lilien, and William Whitby.
