

Education Club Becomes ACE

The Elementary Education Club was formally installed as a Student Branch Chapter of Lock Haven State Teachers College Saturday. Mrs. Nora Graffius is the group's sponsor.

The formation of a professional education group on campus is very significant, according to Dr. C. O. Williams. He said that it is of the utmost importance that prospective teachers be affiliated with professional societies. In that way they graduate from college as members of the profession, not outsiders having to break into the profession.

The A.C.E. chapter at the College has 62 members. They are for the most part Elementary Education majors. However, membership is open to all faculty members, students in the School of Education, and students interested in Child Development.

Francine Gittelmacher holds the office of Organizer and President. Norma Van Tuyle is Vice-president, and Violet Gillespie and Marjorie Gorham are Secretary and Treasurer, respectively. Miss Margaret Neuber and Dr. Florence Taylor act as faculty advisors to the chapter.

WSGA Aids Chinese

Qualified Chinese women physicians and nurses numbering twenty-six, who care for sick and injured civilians among their people in Chengtu, West China, are supported by the American Women's Hospitals, a welfare group whose work is aided by an annual gift from the WSGA Christmas Drive collections.

In addition to supporting the AWH, proceeds from the drive this year will be contributed to the Mifflin County Children's Aid Society in Lewistown and to the Mrs. Hetzel's Emergency Fund. A total of $450 is the goal and unit presidents will solicit women stu-

Cwens Honor Inactives With Mock Tapping

Cwens, women's activities honorary, held a mock tapping for inactive members in the Allencrest at 8:30 Sunday morning.

Since no sophomore women are eligible for the society, Cwens re-tapped last year's members and honored them with a breakfast at which time they were presented with wristlets of red carnations.

Terry Klosterman was chairman of the mock tapping. Ann Luntz and Marilyn Jacobson took care of favors and Joan Bihl headed the tapping committee.

Jane Weigle made time and place arrangements and Betty Lou Horn headed the invitations committee.

The inactive Cwens were awakened at 7:30 Sunday morning and taken to the Allencrest to breakfast, just as in a true Cwen tapping.

dents in their sections until Friday, the last day of the drive.

Commenting upon the first report of collections of the drive, Miss Lucille Anderson, assistant to the dean of women said "$108.23 is fine for a first report and we expect to achieve the goal by Friday. Contributions from those who would like to make gifts will be appreciated. Chimney boxes have been placed in Old Main and the Corner Room for their use."

Robeson--

he had been at Penn State before, he said, "Mr. Robeson likes to perform at colleges because he feels at home with the students and they enjoy him."

Signs Autographs

Half an hour later, having graciously complied with requests for autographs, the tremendous Mr. Robeson walked back into the dressing room. He was as generous with his conversation as he had been with his encores.

He was asked whether or not the songs he sang were meant to have a political intent and if he arranged his program to convey a message?

Songs Convey Message

"Yes, I do mean to convey some message when I sing," he said. "My programs don't have any songs that are political in title or in origin, but I do hope they say something. In fact, I wouldn't be on the stage today if I couldn't express myself."

Concerning racial troubles in the U. S., Robeson says, "My advice to the Negro people is for them to be as militant as they can be. This I say, even though many other Negro leaders counsel them to take a slower course of action."

Thanks College

We helped him put on his coat and thought of how much passion flashed through his huge body as he sang of "the oppressed" in the "Chassidic Chant"; the forcefulness with which he stomped his foot when he sang about the betrayal of the Spanish Republic by the insurgent generals. Still fresh was the memory of his introduction of a Soviet song, the words, "Our allies in war and I hope in peace."

Easily brought to mind was his speech immediately after the concert, when he thanked Bob Higgins, The Athletic Association, and the College for the reception accorded him and for Penn State standing as an "example of what true democracy can be."

As he left he seemed to personify the words he sang from "Old Man River." "I'll keep fighting till I'm dying."

Debaters Win Over Cadets

Men's Varsity Debate Squad decided the U. S. Military Academy at West Point Saturday to feature its first Eastern trip of the current season. Engaging in debates at the Sloane House in New York, and with Brooklyn College in addition to the West Point meet, Professor Joseph F. O'Brien's charges wound up their pre-holiday schedule.

Defeating the Cadets on a 2-1 verdict dealt by the two majors and a lieutenant colonel who served as judges, the College's team broke the existing deadlock and entered into a 3-2 margin in the rivalry which has extended over the last four years.

This decision also was the forty-second win in fifty decision debates for the varsity debate squad over the past two years.

Only the negative team opposed the West Pointmen; as Fred Kecker and Malcolm Goldstein, negative debaters, accomplished the unusual feat of winning over the Cadets on their home grounds. The question debated was, "Resolved, That labor should be given a direct share in the management of industry."

In its third intercollegiate debate, the College squad encountered Brooklyn College; the labor-management problem was also debated here. Samuel Neely and Edward Joyner were the affirmative members with Kecker and Goldstein arguing for the negative.

An inter-team cross examination was the program at the William Sloane House Forum, with American efforts to conciliate Russia discussed by team members.
