Ironed Out

The entire issue of the delegates to be sent to Chicago seems to have been ironed out at last. After several discussions with the students who wrote the letter last week, the mutual decision seems to be that they were mainly interested in seeing that the Convention receive the fullest publicity possible in order to acquaint the student body with the issues under discussion and thus present an opening for the students to express their opinions.

It now appears that All-College Cabinet was not entirely to blame because the matter did not receive full publicity; rather it can be traced in part to the student ACC leaders who had been asked to present the problem and who did not elaborate on details; Collegian too must assume part of the responsibility for not having presented to the Student body the complete story sooner.

Letters

Once Again, Student Union . . .

TO THE EDITOR: Once again the need for a Student Union building became apparent Sunday. I am referring to the Chapel service which was the Christmas musical program.

It was a difficult feat to drag myself out of bed on Sunday morning; it was worse going out into the cold and struggling from Pollock Circle to Schwab auditorium.

But the pay-off came when one of the campus patrolmen told me that Schwab was filled to capacity and that hundreds of people had already been turned away.

This isn't the first Christmas season in which a musical service has been presented. Someone should have had the foresight to make arrangements to handle the large crowd that must have been expected. After all, if it was worthwhile to put in the work necessary to perfect the program, then it should have been worth something to make arrangements for its presentation.

What is the remedy for a situation like this? I would like to offer some suggestions.

The service could have been open to students and faculty only. This is the most unsatisfactory solution of any and perhaps no better than the actual situation.

However, if the chapel service had been held in Rec Hall, I'm sure there would have been sufficient room for anyone who wished to attend. An organ is available for Rec Hall, because one was used there at the Convocation earlier in the semester. Another advantage to this solution it would have allowed the Thespians to carry over their show into this week and would have given many more people a chance to see "No Kiek Coming."

What is being done about a Student Union building? We need a Student Union building today; we needed a Student Union building Sunday morning. Day in and day out we see the need of a Student Union building. That would be an ideal solution to situations such as Sunday morning.

It is not difficult to see that Penn State has outgrown its bitches. It has enlarged and matured to an alarming degree. Crowded conditions are understandable and acceptable when there is no remedy, but there is no excuse for sloppy planning.

Edward A. Hinkle
Mr. Hinkle is right, the College is getting too big; a fact that seems to have been recognized by the College, which has outlined a $60,000,000 expansion program. The trouble lies with the group controlling the purse strings, the legislature in Harrisburg. As yet they have not developed the feeling that it is just as important to have the best College in the Union as it is to have the most paved roads, produce the most ice cream or dig a great deal of coal. Over the holidays, why not ask your state representative or senators what they are doing for the College? They probably don't even know where Penn State is.

Cabinet Adds Two Changes

Two amendments recently proposed for the All-College Cabinet constitution were passed at the last meeting of that body.

A change in Article V, section 1 requires general elections in all school councils who wish to hold a voting seat on All-College Cabinet. The second change in Article II, section 4 provides that the All-College president must be a registered senior, hold an all-college average of at least a 1 and must not hold a bachelor's degree.

A proposal was made to grant a $50 scholarship to the All-College vice-president in order to put that position and the amount of work it entails on a level with the rest of the All-College officers. The motion was tabled for further consideration.

Robert Foote, All-College president, then listed some student problems which he proposed to take up with President Hetzel. Those questions concerned a clarification of the Student-Faculty Council policy at the student conference to be held in Chicago and a mass meeting to be held for the consideration of Cabinet, committee and class reports.

Foote will also discuss with Hetzel the possibility of having a state-wide student convention here at the College, trips to Undergraduate Centers to give students in those schools a feeling of interest in Penn State, the possibility of having a room in which to keep records of campus organizations and to obtain statements concerning the proposed college flag and bulletin board.

Raymond Shibley and Jacqueline Zivic were appointed to a committee to see if the tennis courts could be flooded this winter making ponds for ice skating. Richard Sarge, sophomore class president, read a proposed budget for the Soph Mixed to be held January 24.

Fred Kecker, a member of the Liberal Arts Student Council, announced that efforts were being made to obtain administration backing in a program to overhaul Liberal Arts text books and courses.

Mention was made of the attempts to open the Sandwich Shop as a dining commons for independent men and to obtain an exension on Christmas vacation. Both were found to be still tied up in administration offices.
