

Rumors Are Flying That We Are Denying

Rumors are flying about on campus in connection with artificially freezing the ice-hockey rink so that the team would not have to wait for freezing weather in order to play.

It was rumored that the team would play on a rink at the lower end of the golf course, and that the College was planning to build a cold-storage locker in that vicinity. Tying the two together, it seemed reasonable that the food freezing unit could supply the rink with artificial ice.

The College may build a food freezing unit locally, George W. Ebert, superintendent of Grounds and Building said, but the rest of the rumor ran up against a stone wall.

In order to keep a rink always frozen it is necessary that it be enclosed, and the College has no plans of building an enclosed rink. If there were an enclosed rink, it would take all the equipment of the frozen food locker to keep the

Hills and Chills Thrill Ski Fans

Those star gazers on the Mall the other night were probably looking for snow after seeing the thrills, chills and spills of "Skis in the Sky," the John Jay show at Schwab Auditorium Monday night.

An appreciative audience of ski and snow enthusiasts saw two and a half hours of scenic beauty and inspiring action in a film-lecture about a trio of snow bunnies who headed West where the snow lies deep.

Starting from Pennsylvania, the party went to Steamboat Spring, Colorado, and Aspen, Colorado. Enroute to this 14,000 foot altitude, they stopped to exercise skating on a highway covered with ice.

freezing temperature constant, leaving no power for the locker itself.

And after all, the hockey team does not play anywhere near the golf course. The rink is situated by the soccer playing field under the east stands of the stadium.

Lana Turner Here For A 'Spell,' Seen In Dorm 6

Jim Neiman

Du Maurier had Svengali, the prize ring had Evil-Eye Finkle, and Penn State has Ted Kunin.

Ted Kunin, who is a sophomore, began hypnotizing people about three years ago while he was in the navy. He used to do favors for his buddies by sending them home for a month's leave... all in an hour or two... through the power of suggestion.

In Dorm 6 on Sunday evening, Jim Stevenson, with a little help from Kunin, began to see polar bears, donkeys, and even Lana Turner.

Kunin began by stroking the subject's neck and talking in a dull suggestive monotone, and Stevenson, who has been hypnotized quite often by Kunin, fell asleep in five minutes.

"I am putting glue on your hands, and now it is dried fast. Try to pull them apart," said Kunin.

Stevenson tugged and pulled and the muscles in his arms strained, but he could not bring his hands apart.

He was then told that he was going to go on a trip. "You are walking on the desert," Kunin said. "The sun is beating down and your throat is parched."

Perspiration broke out on Stevenson's body. He began to lick his dry lips and wipe his face with his hands.

At Kunin's suggestion, Stevenson came to an oasis in the desert, and he was given a glass of water to drink. He gulped the life-saving liquid furiously, as though it were the first water he had drunk for days. After that he felt much better.

No demonstration of hypnosis is quite complete without a post-hypnotic suggestion. Kunin told the subject that after he awakened, he would not be able to see one of the fellows who was in the room. This is known as negative hallucination. However, when he was pointed to, the missing man would appear. But he would have long ears like a donkey.

Stevenson was brought out of it, given a cigarette, and asked how he felt. The answer was "fine". Then Kunin pointed.

Stevenson dropped his cigarette to the floor and stood up with his hands over his eyes. The shock was

Why Delay-Try Today Pick Up Collegian The Easy Way

Do you wear fluffy bunny fur mittens, bulky leather gloves, or modified boxing mits when trying to pick up your Daily Collegian at the Student Union desk? You do? Read on!

"Trying to pick up Collegians with gloves on," said George Donovan, Student Union Manager, "is the one thing that holds up the Collegian line 15 to 20 minutes. Students, instead of getting one paper, pick up about six, and then have a terrific time putting the other five back again. Students will be helping themselves, and others if they remove their gloves before its their turn for a Collegian."

a little too much. He leaned on the table not daring to look back at the man with the donkey's ears. "My God," he said. "What did you do to me?"

Kunin told him it was all right, and that the ears had become normal. Stevenson really needed the next cigarette that was lit for him.
