Men's Varsity Debate Squad finished runner-up to the University of Pittsburgh in the Mount Mercy College Invitation Debate, held Saturday in Pittsburgh.

Representing the College, an affirmative squad composed of Fred Chusid and Peter Giesey joined with negative members Harold Krauss and Fred Kecker to gain six wins in eight decisions. Only Pittsburgh from among the eighteen schools represented, was able to better this mark.

The question discussed was: "Resolved, That labor shall have a definite share in the management of industry."

speeches between Torvald and Nora. In the original script Torvald says, "Is that my lark twittering there?" Nora answers yes, and Torvald says, "Is it the squirrel chipping about?"

In the lines revised by Mr. Cloetingh, Torvald says, "Is that my wife singing out there?" When Nora answers yes, Torvald says, "And what is my wife doing?"

When Ibsen wrote "A Doll's House" the problem of the play dealt with a family matter. However, Mr. Cloetingh has so revised the play that it is not only the problem of a family, but a problem of the world.

The underlying theme of the original play is the striving of woman to achieve freedom. Mr. Cloetingh has enlarged upon that idea so that the basic problem is the striving of the world for "individual freedom."

Certain of Ibsen's philosophies that the director has used in the play were taken from a collection of letters in which the playwright expressed himself freely. An example of this is when Nora tells Christine how much she loves the sea and that she feels she is a part of it.

In the original script, Nora says only that she loves the sea. The rest of the speech was taken almost directly by Mr. Cloetingh from one of Ibsen's letters.
