The UN Must be Made To Work

People on this campus have been saying that if we want something we ought to go in and fight for it.

They have been saying that the UN has failed,
old that war with Russia is inevitable.
Let these people stop and think for a minute. Let them think of what this inevitable war might turn out to be. It would be a matter of atomic bombs, and man-made bacteriological plagues. It would not be a matter of sweating out a screaming-willy attack by becoming part of a fox-hole. It would be coming through specify and then having to store to would be through safely, and then having to stop to wonder how your people back in Scranton or Philadelphia came out.

It would not be returning whole and hearty to the United States after months or years in some desolated country. It would be returning from one desolated country to another country just as desolated.

And what would be gained? Is there any assur-ance that the world would be safer for democracy after three world wars than it is after two?

The UN must not be allowed to fail, because everything else has been tried before. Everything else has led us into war. A strong world organization would be something new, and the UN must be made strong and given a chance. Peace isn't just important; it's a necessity.

to be shortened at their own expense. Although the cost of such an alteration is not much, it is not right to expect the men to pay for it.

Basics were ordered to draw new uniforms; they did not request that these uniforms be issued. They exchange trousers that fit them for pants needing an alteration.

Unlike, the uniforms issued to student officers, the ones being issued to basics must be returned at the end of the semester.

While the man to whom the uniform is issued originally pays for the alteration, successive men who use the same uniform benefit directly from the money spent by the first man for the alteration.

Who benefits in the end? The Pennsylvania State College ROTC Unit benefits because all the trousers used this semester will have been altered at the present weaters' expense.

When so many pairs of pants are involved, it is only fair that the Unit should employ a civilian tailor to do all the alterations under contract, or to reimburse the basics if they take the trousers' to tailors in town.

Basics do not receive any payment for serv-ing in the ROTC Unit: Therefore, why should they be expected to spend money for a purely military purpose?

To Other Letter-writers

TO THE EDITOR:

Each day, The Collegian, like good papers do, Has a place for its readers, found on page two. It's a spot that we all can feel free to use To express our ideas and tell others our views. Often you'll find there a bit that's worthwhile, And sometimes a letter that causes a smile. Letters on cheating, on students who boo. The cabinet's agenda—to name but a few. But mixed with the good ones are some not so hot; Some that are full of just plain rot! I know that you should print all that you get So each could be heard—and yet, It isn't the place to carry on feuds, To call people "Crybabies," or "Cornerroom Dudes. So cut out this drivel, you're printing of late, And fulfill your motto—"For a Better Penn State." —F. Richardson.
