The Bridge Club Replies

TO THE EDITOR: In the Daily Collegian issued October 29, 1946, it announced that a bridge club had been formed. Before that, issues had called forth all bridge players to the organizational meeting.

Subsequent issues carried meeting dates and activities. On February 11 and 13, playoffs were held. There were no restrictions. Several men played then who had never attended a meeting before and have not attended one since.

The hands mailed to us by the Intercollege Bridge Tournament Committee were played February 14.

If the four men who wished the Bridge Club good luck in the March 13 letter in the Collegian had been the slightest bit interested, a walk to Old Main to one of the meetings would have been in order. We cannot issue personal invitations. I should like to say here, however, we would be glad to have anyone interested in duplicate bridge come to our meetings. Duplicate play is featured at every meeting.

Anyone interested in learning how to play bridge is invited to join our beginners class.

Editorials and features in The Collegian reflect the opinions of the writer. They make no claim to represent student or University opinion. All unsigned editorials are by the editor.

Topnotch Entertainment

TO THE EDITOR: The All-College Talent Show staged at Schwab Auditorium Friday evening proved to be a creditable success in paying-off with topnotch entertainment, but the mediocre turnout makes one wonder why entertainment-hungry students failed to take advantage of a good thing?

An enjoyable, better-than-two-hour variety program provided this vainly-sought recreation well within any budget.

Yet the "wailing-wall" still reverberates with lugubrious complaints of students who, while bemoaning the fact that exorbitant rates are charged for admission to class, "Z" stinkeroos, still line the pockets of the freres Warner before supporting a worthy Club-sponsored activity.

Maybe the low admission charge scared away the desired attendance figure?

At a buck-eighty a head, Schwab was loaded with "long-hairs" and some disinterested students who were more or less compelled to sit through a near-agonizing two-hours of listening to the celebrated fiddler, Georges Enesco, because of the series block-booking. At intermission, approximately one-third of the audience "took a powder," and a number of the remaining found the strains emanating from the violin very conducive to sleeping.

Maybe the talent show wasn't of a buck-eighty calibre, but few, if any, of the spectators left early, and as for snoozers—impossible!

Experienced trouper's abhor the thought of playing before a half-filled house, so why should student-entertainers feel different?

They need the encouragement tendered to fledglings in any field. So, Richard, for a BIGGER and BETTER Penn State, let's open that door by backing campus activities!

—Fred A. Peruzzi.

Penn State Club

TO THE EDITOR: The Penn State Club wishes to express thanks to the appreciative audience for their gracious reception of the contestants at the Annual All-College Talent Show in Schwab Auditorium March 14.

In extending its bouquets the Club regrets that prizes couldn't have been offered to all the competing artists for their performances; since the scorings were relatively close. We feel that almost any of the contestants could rightfully have enhanced any show.

Our thanks to the five judges and to all others who helped make the show a success.

Special credit is due the master of ceremonies, Henry Glass, for unifying the proceedings and providing the laughs throughout the show.

—Albert C. Lucas, Jr.,
President, Penn State Club.

Cut Ticket Costs

TO THE EDITOR: The bigwig students on this campus certainly make themselves look silly. On the first page of Tuesday's Collegian was a story announcing the I.F.C. Ball to be held April 18.

In this story the already accepted idea of a no-corsage dance was stated and the ridiculously high price of tickets quoted. The reason the no-corsage policy was originated was to make big week-ends a little less expensive.

That is a commendable idea, but why don't we start cleaning house right at home and cut the price of tickets? This isn't supposed to be a money-making dance and there is no reason to charge a price like that, thereby limiting the class of students that may go to this dance.

The students who set these prices are no doubt among the ones who support the demand for lower-priced movies in State College. As far as I'm concerned, the merchants in town now have the laugh on us. Let's do something about this matter and the time to start is now!

Sincerely,
Robert Klein.

Interested Speakers

TO THE EDITOR: Friday night a well-informed audience saw two interesting speakers matched against each other in the declamatory ring.

Mr. Knickerbocker, representing the negative corner, tossed verbal hooks and jabs at an unfused Mr. Duranty of the affirmative side. It soon became apparent that the loosely thrown punches of Slugger K. hardly fazed the experienced light-footed champ. A referee surely would have called a TKO against the dumfounded contender.

Whether either was right only the coming years' events will show. But one thing stands out clearly, two men shadow-boxing the issue and each other definitely becomes a sideshow, well worth the admission.

—W. Peter Horen.

Parking on the Grass

TO THE EDITOR: In answer to Miss Peters' article in last Wednesday's Collegian that cars parking in the Tri-Dorm area are ruining the lawn, I would like to explain why the College is permitting the overflow of cars from the Rec Hall and Sparks parking areas to park on the grass.

Plans have been completed for the erection of the Dining Hall section of the proposed Men's Dorms in that area. It is planned that construction will be started here sometime this Spring or Summer, and that materials will be moved in at that time.

Because the College is cramped for parking space, especially during athletic events, they are forced to put the overflow cars in the Tri-Dorm area. In this case, feel justified in using the Tri-Dorm area.

—Charles D. Whiggoc,
Chairman, Keep Off the Grass Comm.
