

Penn State Women Again Appear at State Pen

Before an attentive audience of three hundred well-groomed men, Betsy Marshall and Harriet Morgan defended the affirmative proposition of the Labor-Management problem against a Rutgers University negative squad, Wednesday evening. The scene: Rockview Penitentiary.

This debate, a non-decision contest, marks the Women's Debate Team's third appearance in the prison auditorium. Before the war a delegation from Princeton composed the opposition, and in 1946 the Syracuse men.

The Princeton debate, which also concerned the labor problem, greatly interested the prisoners. At breakfast the following morning, they reopened the question with great vigor. Black eyes resulted.

When a half dozen inmates walked out of the Syracuse contest, someone shouted, "There go the morons!" Reverend Lauer, Chaplain, explaining the Oregon style, quipped, "I guess you fellows all know what cross-examination is."

According to Reverend Lauer, the audience at the Rutgers debate was composed largely of the "school men." Unknown to some, the College operates an extension service with credits at the prison. Since the coeds received more applause, perhaps we may assume that the prisoners were more in favor of the affirmative plan. (Perhaps, that is.)

Mr. Cutler of Rutgers when introducing his topic said with typical debate courtesy, "It's not often we have an opportunity to see such lovely young ladies." "Ditto," echoed several times.

Home Ec Department To Make Book Award

The College was recently chosen to participate in the Philip W. Pillsbury Shelf of Home Economics Books award.

The award, made annually, is to be presented to the highest ranking student in home economics in the College's 1947 graduating class. The winner is selected by a faculty committee.

This is the fourth consecutive year that the College has been included on the select list (which numbered 33 in 1944) of universities and colleges participating in the award.

The honor was established by Philip W. Pillsbury, president of the milling firm, to recognize the scholastic achievements of students majoring in home economics.

Recipient of the award last year was Sarah T. Masurovsky.

Beaux Arts—

As a special feature of the dance everyone present will be given cardboard and crayon to draw a picture. Entrants must be amateurs and the drawings will be judged on ingenuity, neatness, originality and spontaneity of design. A prize will be given to the best one.

These drawings, as well as the pictures from the Beaux Arts Ball Art Exhibit, will form part of the wall decorations.

Prizes are to be awarded to the couple wearing the most original costume, and two individual prizes are to be given. Judges of the costumes are Andrew W. Case and Dr. Harold E. Dickson, professors of fine arts, and Milton S. Osborne, head of the architecture department.

The Campus Owls, who will provide the music, have several new arrangements they are going to use for the first time.

The intermission will begin at 10:30 p.m. and feature Gloria Trovatioli and Adele Yablon, singers, and Sara Jane Chersshore, dancer. Joan Berchtold will be at the piano. William McTurk will act as master of ceremonies and present the prizes.

Adolf Gives 3rd In Simmons Series

Dr. Helen Adolf, assistant professor of German, will present the third in the series of Simmons Lectures in Room 121, Sparks Building, at 4:15 o'clock Monday afternoon. She will discuss "Kierkegaard and Existentialism."

Kierkegaard, a 19th century Danish thinker, has cast a spell over theologians, philosophers and poets throughout the world. His works, unique for their mixture of irony, passion, and deep psychological insight, are well-known in this country.

Dr. Adolf, who has been teaching here since last September, joined the faculty three years ago and taught at the Altoona Undergraduate Center of the College. She has studied Scandinavian literature and the psychology of religion and served for ten years as secretary of the International Society for Psychology and Religion at Vienna, Austria.

PSCA Requests Books For Chinese Universities

Commission IV of the Penn State Christian Association is requesting text books for Chinese Universities.

According to Prof. C. C. Hsiao, here at the College, University libraries have been depleted during the war, and students need texts to furnish supplementary material to their class notes.

This commission also plans to have a paint party in one room, school houses April 12. Volunteers may sign up at the CA office, said Frank Richardson.

AEPH's Celebrate With Alum Weekend

The Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority is marking its tenth anniversary on campus this weekend with an alumnae celebration.

Activities for the weekend include a welcoming party tonight at the home of Mrs. Charles Schiow, the sorority's advisor, a bridge party tomorrow afternoon, and a banquet tomorrow night.

There will be an open house at the Pi Lambda Phi fraternity tomorrow night from 10 to 1. On Sunday morning the sorority will give a farewell brunch for the alumnae.

Originally the sorority was a local club, Astriad, which was started by five girls in December, 1935. The charter members and their activities were Anne Rudolf, president of Mortar Board, president of Judicial, member of Froth business staff, and Phi Gamma Mu.

Miriam Ellowitch, member of Phi Sigma Iota and assistant manager of women's hockey; Myra Cohen, member of Delta Sigma Rho; Irma Harris, member of Phi Sigma Iota; and Mildred Spero, member of the Hillel Council.

Scholastically, Astriad topped all other sororities in its first semester on campus with a 1.88 average.

When the group became the Alpha Zeta chapter of Alpha Epsilon Phi on April 10, 1937, there were nine charter members. The sorori-

Professor Speaks At Luncheon Club

Pianist Gives Advice To Young Musicians

Louise Meizner, featured pianist in last night's concert, summed up her advice to aspiring musicians in three words—"patience, perseverance, and hard work."

Miss Meizner has been playing the piano since she was three years old. She was in her first recital at the age of five and went on her first concert tour at the age of 15. Since then she has been touring the United States each year.

Returning to Penn State for her third performance, Miss Meizner remarked, "I always enjoy playing for college audiences. They're not quite as sophisticated and hard-boiled as New York audiences."

Miss Meizner lives in New York now, but rather dubiously claims St. Louis as her home town. Her confusion arises out of the galaxy of cities and countries she has lived and studied in since her earliest years.

Her first teacher was her mother, also a pianist. Her mother took her to Budapest in 1930 where she studied for eight years and then went on to the Juilliard Graduate School of Music. She is also a little confused when it comes to drawing the line as to when she first started professionally.

"I always played for concerts even when I was studying, although I didn't have my first legitimate tour until I was 15," she stated.

After this performance, Miss Meizner is going back to New York to rest before starting her summer tour in June.
