Made on campus by the Motion Picture Studio of the College, the color film is a thirty-minute movie and will be run in two showings. The first showing will be held at 7 o'clock and the second an hour later.

The movie depicts the College's services to the Commonwealth and how they have been developed since the Land Grant Act of 1862.

Froth Names Coed Queen, Adds Extra Cartoons In IFC Ball Issue

Queen of Penn State, chosen in the recent coed beauty contest, will reign over the IFC Ball issue of Froth on sale Tuesday at Student Union, the Corner Room and Graham's A.C.

The queen is entered in a national contest for the selection of Miss American Coed of 1947. The national winner's photo will appear in the Froth Senior Ball Issue.

Penn State's hero, X. G. Eye, returns to Froth this month in the thrilling tale of his adventures with the nefarious villain of the Orient, Peiping Tom.

Frothy also boasts an extra page of cartoons plus all regular features and columns.

It portrays the College's three primary services under the land grant charter—instruction, research and extension.

The new film, now being released for interested groups throughout the State, describes the College's wartime efforts, including the instruction of more than 7000 trainees assigned to the campus for training by the Army, Navy and Air Corps, and of the 140,000 men and women who received special technical training for jobs in war industries.

Two features of the film include the College's treatment of its current postwar problems—Windcrest, veterans' trailer community set up to accommodate 333 ex-GI's and their families; and the freshman farmout system, by which the College has placed 3000 first-year students in 21 co-operating college centers throughout the Commonwealth.

The movie depicts also some of the future problems that the College must solve if it is to meet the current unprecedented demand for educational facilities.

Concerns Give Fellowships

Two new research agreements, one with Ferro-Enamel Corp., providing a fellowship in ceramics, and one with Kraft Foods for research in cheese manufacture, were announced at a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees.

Research contracts were renewed with Allied Chemical and Dye Corp. for chemistry research; Charles Pfizer Co., penicillin research in agriculture; and Crop Protection Institute, research in botany.

For research in the School of Mineral Industries, three companies matched $34,000 supplied by the State Legislature. They are Penn Grade Crude Oil, Carnegie-Illinois Steel, and Brockway Glass.

The committee also accepted a proposal under which the College will lease buildings and grounds for fruit research in Erie County.

The building will be constructed by the Erie County Agricultural Research Corp. The College will lease the building and do research until monthly rental payments reach total cost of construction, when the College will acquire the property.

The College's cross country running course is located along the margin of the Golf Course.
